ANTHEMS

by Minnie Case Hopkins

Once a mother, long ago,
Made a sweater bed,
Picked soft grasses from the hay
For her baby's head.
While above her and her son
Heavenly hosts drew near;
Rang an anthem from the
Listening worlds might hear.

Once I made a cradle bed,
Lined it with soft lace;
Stitched to gaze with raptured awe
At a baby's face.
And about me and above
Sweet as sweet could be,
Rang an anthem from the skies,
Though none heard but me.

Tailor-made suits to be spring
Style—
Be on the lookout for tailor-made suits for spring. They are sure to be one of the "highlights," according to every report that has been received so far.

The coats will be of many lengths—some short, some hip length, some finger-tip length and others still longer. Those that hover between three-quarter and finger-tip length are the very latest.

As for colors, they will be the Oxford shades, the medium grays in solid colors and many other mixtures. Navy and black there will be, to be sure, as well as tweeds and home-spuns in the usual tans and browns that are identified all-ways with tweeds.

Tweed bags on tortoise shell tops are being shown in the exclusive shops for wear with the new tweed outfits.

Books Of The Week—
"The Vase of Bronze," by Myrtle Fuller Logan.
"A Vampire and Other Stories," by Lavina Leitch.
"Nature's Way," by Charles F. Clarke.

"The African Saga" (Anthology of Folklore) by Blaise Cendrars.
"The Mosaic Earring," by Columbia Boyer.
"The Tunnel Through The Air," by W. D. Gann.
"Sea Legs," by Alfred F. Loomis.

Review Of New Book—
"The Constant Sloop," by Nell Martin. New York. Rae D. Hinkle Co., $2.

"The Constant Sloop" is a pleasantly ridiculous story about a truly startling stenographer that got her attorney into and out of many a legal scrape, but shows no signs of marrying him at the end of the book. Only as to title is it a burlesque of "The Constant Nymph"; its plot and characters are original and amusing.

Maisie, the dabbler secretary of George Dorsey, is, of course, actually his good angel; and her good angels in turn are permanently on the job to keep her out of too much trouble. She helps build up George's practice in ways he had never dreamed about; and though he thought he fired her she refuses to be fired. The obvious thing for the author to do would be to have Maisie marry her lawyer at the close of the book; but thank goodness, Maisie contents herself with assisting him in his career in ways that will prove amusing to the reader and furnish several idle hours' entertainment.

P. T. A. Party In Afternoon—
On account of so many other social affairs on the evening of Friday, December 5, the card party in the Civic clubhouse on Winburn Way, which was to have been given on that evening, has been changed to Friday afternoon, December 5.

The High School circle of the P. T. A. is sponsoring this party to replace the money in their treasury which was advanced to send the Ashland delegates to the convention, held recently at La Grande.

Correction—
An error was made in the society section of Saturday's paper in giving the account of the dinner party Thursday evening, December 4, at the home of Mrs. O. W. Long on East Main street, by designating Mrs. Long as hostess.

The dinner was rather of covered-dish affair, each person bringing some article of food to complete the menu. There was no special hostess as the Eleven O'clock Bridge club holds these dinners every few weeks.

Jackson County Girl Married—
Hefnerman-Hanley

Wednesday, noon in St. James' Cathedral. Miss Kathryn Hanley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burnett Hanley, was married to Mr. Robert Daniel Hefnerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Timothy Hefnerman, at one of the most brilliant weddings of the season.

The ceremony was performed by the Rt. Rev. Edward J. O'Dea, bishop of the Seattle diocese, assisted by Monsignor Theodore Ryan. The nuptial mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father A. P. McHugh of St. Patrick's Church. Later there was a small wedding breakfast and reception for relatives and intimate friends at the Hanley residence.

Miss Hanley, an unusually beautiful girl, was exquisite in her wedding gown of ivory velvet, an Empire model of formal straight lines. Rare rose point outlined the V-neck bodice and formed the long sleeves, and the court train was in one with the long straight skirt. With it she wore a tulle veil bound with a small crown of the lace and clusters of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white orchids, bouvardia and lilies of the valley.

Great bouquets of white chrysanthemums and trailing vines marked the pews of the cathedral, and within the sanctuary the flickering glow of myriad altar candles shone on white columns against a green wall of palms banked with chrysanthemums against a green wall of palms and ferns.

The house, for the reception later, was bright with deep gold and bronze chrysanthemums in standards and baskets about the rooms.

Assisting were Mrs. George T. Myers, Mrs. John Harrington, Edwards, Mrs. Charles Brown, Mrs. Frank Madden.

For traveling the bride wore an ensemble costume of beige color, with a hat to match and a corsage bouquet of orchids.

Mr. and Mrs. Hefnerman will make their home in Tacoma. Seattle Times.

The bride was born in Jackson county, lived here until a few years ago, when she moved with her parents to Seattle, and has a number of relatives and a large number of friends in southern Oregon.

VINING GIVES FINE ADDRESS

Eternal Values of Life to be Considered Says Speaker

I. E. Vining, who delivered the address at the Lodge of Sorrows conducted by the Medford B. P. O. Elks yesterday afternoon, emphasized that the eternal values of life should be carefully considered, as the small inconsequential things so often leave nothing of value in one's life.

Mr. Vining masterfully spoke of the child's faith and trust, only to be shattered later to ascertain that all in the world is not good. He said that the way should remain bright, the way enthusiastic and the heart content to beat in contentment, however.

Reminding his listeners that to err is human, but to forgive is divine. He spoke of faith, hope and charity, the principles which guide Elksdom and stated it was the happy privilege of Elksdom at the Christmas season to extend bounty to the needy.

Mr. Vining said in concluding his address that it brought happiness to place love, reverence and faith into the chalice at the shrine of Elksdom and to raise it in loving remembrance to the departed brothers.

His address and the regular program was broadcast by KMED at Medford, and many in Ashland enjoyed the program.

THE MOST VALUABLE PLAYER AWARDED
It was harder this year than ever before for the baseball writers committee to decide upon the most valuable player in the National League.

The award finally went to Paul Waner, fleet right fielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, 1927 champions.

Few will dispute the choice of the youngster from Harrah, Oklahoma, as the most valuable to his team of all the season's stars, although Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals, Rogers Hornsby of the Giants and Charley Root of the Cubs were not far behind.

The balloting was closer this year than on any previous occasions, Waner receiving 72 votes, Frisch, 55, Hornsby, 54, Root, 45, and others, including Travis Jackson and Grover Cleveland Alexander, considerable support.

Last year, for instance, Bob O'Farrell, who won the most valuable player award, received 79 votes, while Hughie Crits, second choice, was far behind with 60, and Ray Kramer, of Pittsburgh, the third man, was the recipient of but 52 votes.

Paul Waner was the most important cog in the machine which finally settled into first place at the very finish of an exciting National League race. With his brother, Lloyd, he solved the outfield problem after the defection of "Kiki" Cuyler.

This was Waner's second full year in the majors, as he was purchased from San Francisco along with Hal Rhyne in 1925. For the two seasons he has hit well over .300, and his fielding has been of the aggressive, "try-for-everything" type.

A ball player's ball player who can hit in a pinch or a world series as well as right through the long playing season, P. Waner joins a select company which includes O'Farrell, Hornsby and Dazzy Vance, the Brooklyn pitcher.

The award, announced today, carries with it a present of $1,000 in gold from the National League.

BASKETBALL POPULAR

Basketball practice is on the regular schedule of activities at the Southern Oregon Normal school and Coach Mac McNeal is working his material into fine shape. Some real promising holdovers from the squad last year are included in the squad turning out for practice this year.

NO MAIL ON CHRISTMAS

Postal Employees Will Enjoy a Full Holiday Sunday, Dec. 25

Postoffice employees will enjoy Christmas Day with their families this year according to a ruling of the department.

There will be no deliveries of mail on Christmas Day, Sunday, December 25, except special delivery, a service which is regularly maintained.

Delivery on Monday, December 26, will end at noon, according to the postal ruling.

Christmas mail is already becoming heavy at the local postoffice, indicating the growing tendency on the part of the public to cooperate with postal officials in making the congestion which has been prevalent in past years, due to the enormous volume of mail, less.

Greeting cards are already being placed in the postoffice.
