BUCHAREST—Both Roumanian and Hungarian wounded in the recent fighting around Budapest have been treated in an American "Mobile Hospital" of the most modern type—the last word in war hospitals for use in the field with a rapidly moving army.

The type of mobile hospital being used is that known as the "Auto-chir." It is a hospital on wheels—eighteen huge automobile trucks equipped with everything needed for war-time medicine and surgery.

There are automobile operating room, automobile sterilizing equipment, an automobile laboratory, a pure water machine with an ice making attachment, an X-ray car, electric light plant, steam heating plant, a blacksmith's repair shop, and a complete tent hospital which can be set up anywhere in about two hours, so as to accommodate more than 400 wounded men.

SALVATION ARMY ON A GOOD WILL MISSION

BERLIN—(By Mail)—The Salvation Army—that institution which many an American doughboy will remember kindly through the years—has started a campaign based on Central Europe's looking toward creation with more of the spirit of "peace on earth, good will to men." Headquarters of the organization, maintained here during the war, but unable to operate extensively because of its allied connections, has reopened fully and has begun the task of establishing branches at Prague, Vienna, Budapest and all through the Balkans.

Col. Treite, in charge of the local headquarters, declared it will be the aim of the central Europe campaign to offer solace to these troubled nations through calming their spirits and their lives. The army will work to wipe out hatreds engendered during the war, and to revive friendly intercourse, he said.

SOUSA'S BAND COMING EVENT

Announcements are being made of the opening of the season on the coast of the famous Sousa's band which is going to be one of the great musical attractions of the season for which John H. Fuller, president of the Chautauqua association has arranged for a date here next month. Lieutenant Sousa has gathered his old world famous band about him and is on the first coast-to-coast tour of the country he has made in several years. As far back as 1885 a foreign musical journal in an article on martial music bestowed on Sousa the title of "March King," and it seemed to fit so well that writers have ever since clung to it. As a composer Sousa has written ten operas, a great number of orchestral suites, songs and miscellaneous pieces, but his greatest success and fame rests with his marches.

Florence Hardman is a talented American violinist with an enviable reputation from New York to the Pacific coast, and Mary Baker is a coloratura soprano who has achieved distinction on the eastern concert stage.

A number of important instrumental soloists have also been engaged to add diversity to the band programs. Louis P. Fritz, formerly flute soloist with the Philadelphia orchestra, will occupy that position in Sousa's band, and Frank Simon, one of the foremost cornetists in America, H. Benne Henton, widely known as a talented saxophone player, and Joseph Green a xylophone player, will also appear with the band.

President Briggs of the Ashland Post, American Legion, outlined the plans of local business men for raising a fund to equip club-rooms in the Armory as a memorial to Ashland service men, at the monthly meeting of the legion Tuesday evening.

The plan was received with grateful enthusiasm by the legion members who were free in voicing their appreciation of the spirit which prompts the action which local business men are taking. The Legion plans to fit up club-rooms which will be irresistible to the young men of the city and vicinity. Company B of the Oregon National Guard will share the club-rooms with the ex-service men.

In the discussion which followed frequent expressions of appreciation of the thought which prompts the formulation of such a practical and useful expression of Ashland's gratitude to her soldier and sailor boys were heard.

The Legion plans to co-operate with the Guard company in giving a dance before long. A banquet for all ex-service men was another project upon which the entertainment committee reported. The Ashland Post will probably co-operate with Medford Post in the latter's observance of Armistice Day at Medford and invite the Medford service men to later affairs here.

The secretary is taking up with the state headquarters the matter of eligibility of Ashland boys who went to Fort Stevens with the old First company but who were discharged there on account of physical disability before the guard was federalized.

Sandwiches, doughnuts, coffee and cigars were demolished in large quantities following the business meeting.

A special meeting of the post to vote on a number of matters pertaining to instruction of the state delegates to the national convention and which have been referred by the state executive committee of Oregon to the local posts for a referendum, will be called in the near future.

Ashland Post now has over one hundred members and expects to have over 150 by Armistice Day when the charter closes. All ex-service men who have not already done so are urged to get application cards filled out immediately. They may be obtained at the Commercial club, Hotel Austin barber shop, or Alnutt's billiard parlor.
