FORDSON Number 100,000 Leaves Factory On February 21st, at 10:45 o'clock, Fordson Tractor number 100,000 left the assembly line in the Fordson plant at Dearborn, Mich., slightly less than two and one-half years after number one was completed. And here again Henry Ford has set a new high record in the manufacture of farm tractors via the quantity production route. Although the Ford interests are very recent entrants in the ranks of the tractor manufacturers, yet Henry Ford really built a tractor—the steam type—before he started work on his first gas car. And incidentally that tractor and the first car are still in very good running condition, and Mr. Ford occasionally demonstrates both to visitors to his farm in Dearborn. Some fifteen years ago Mr. Ford began work on what has come to be the Fordson. This tractor was really a Ford car equipped with special wheels and included, of course, some mechanical changes. By 1905 he had a workable tractor; it plowed, harrowed, and did much other work on the farm. Then ensued nine more years of experimental work before the first tractor was put on the market.
