WILL AMERICANS STAND FOR IT?

The Ford weekly, the Dearborn Independent, in its issue of July 17, will publish the following editorial:

Disappointed by the utter absence of public spirit and responsibility in the national conventions of the republican and democratic parties, the independent American people have succumbed to a sense of deep disgust for partisan politics in general.

The politicians count more confidently than the people realize on that interval of time which stretches between the summer election, if the election were to be held today, and if the law required half the number of votes to be cast as were cast at the last presidential election before a candidate could be chosen, there would not be enough votes cast today to elect either of the candidates to the office for which the parties have chosen them.

The republican convention was openly and shamelessly dominated by the financial representatives of the powers that pull governmental influence like strings. The party's own methods were clogged and soiled with shameless money scandals.

The democratic convention was, if anything, a degree worse, because there was an attempt made at San Francisco which had no parallel at Chicago—the convention was at least given a flaming opportunity to declare its adherence to the moral advance made by the American people with regard to the liquor traffic.

Will there be a clean-up at Washington under Cox or under Harding? Certainly there will be no ouster of the secret rulers of the United States under a republican or a democratic regime.

DEER SEASON PROMISING
Deer are more plentiful than ever before and the season which opens September 1 will undoubtedly be the best here, in the opinion of A. E. Burghdoff, state game warden.

WASTE OF WOMAN POWER
The waste of woman power is one of the greatest menaces to the rural life of the nation, according to deductions that specialists of the United States department of agriculture draws from a farm home survey conducted in the thirty-three Northern and Western states.

There is now no choice whatever between Republican and Democratic candidates, between Republican and Democratic platforms, or, for that matter, between Republican and Democratic parties.

The question is, Will the people stand it? Have they submitted to so much bulldozing at the hands of the politicians and parties, that they have lost their sense of ownership of their own government?

There is no question whatever about the widespread public disgust; the question is, How will it emerge? Will it die down into apathy, or will it flame forth into the protest of a Citizens' Movement with a Citizens' candidate?

It is very doubtful that any party today has the definite cohesion of other years. We hear everlasting talk about "the party" from both democrats and republicans. But where is it? It appears that the "party" consists of the men who meet in national convention, and no one else. These "parties" do what they please and then go out and bid for the suffrages of the American people.

There is no reason whatever why the choice of the American people should be limited to Cox or Harding, to the spineless republican platform or the dead democratic platform. The American people are too big, their problems too pressing, to permit them to stand on either platform.

Third parties have fallen into disrepute because their sole purpose heretofore has been to boost somebody into office; when they failed to do that they were cast aside. Theodore Roosevelt led out of the republican party the best blood in it, the young men of the party whose ideals had not been begimred and whose loyalty to their country had not been weakened by party shackles.

But a movement of the American people, in rebuke of both the subservient democratic and republican parties, would not be the usual "third party"—it would be the nation seizing again its own control out of unworthy hands.

The old parties have no divine right. What a party convention does, need not be received loyally, as if it were an act of government. The people now know—all of the people know—that the last two national conventions were deliberate caucuses, secret in their real work, for the purpose of "putting over" on the people something that the people do not want, and against which they will be in rebellion before another four years.

Whether the people will take up what is given them, or exercise their free power to name their own candidate and make their own platform; whether they will require that their nose be rubbed still deeper in the contempt which the politicians have for them, or will make an end of the present race of politicians at once, is for the immediate future to reveal.

Whether there be a clean-up at Washington under Cox or under Harding? Certainly there will be no ouster of the secret rulers of the United States under a republican or a democratic regime.

If the people want a clean-up, they must act at once, they must act deliberately, they must act without reference to precedents set by the discredited parties, and they must act with a confidence in their supreme control over all their affairs.

WASTE OF WOMAN POWER

cal communities of the country in which the survey was made. Much of the information was gathered personally by home demonstration agents, who are the field representatives of the United States department of agriculture and state agricultural colleges.

Miss Ward points out, from the facts shown by the survey, that a reasonable amount of planning and well-directed investment in modern equipment for farm homes would prevent a large part of this wastage of the energy of the Nation's rural home makers.

"This is a serious matter," she continues, "because we have a live national problem now in working out the economics of country living in such a way as to make them satisfied to stay on the land and help build it up. Perhaps the greatest factor in bringing this about will be the healthy, alert and expert home maker who will see to it that a part of the increased income from the farm goes into improvement of the home."

"At a time like this, when the dearth of farm labor is a limiting factor in production, it is very doubtful business policy for farmers to use increased income to buy more land instead of using a part of it in raising standards of living, so that women and young people will not want to go to the cities in search of attractive living conditions and amusement."

The survey discloses a number of reasons why many women do not find farm life attractive. The working day of the average farm woman, as shown by the survey, is 11.3 hours the year round. In summer it is 13.12 hours. And eighty-seven out of each 100 women have no regular vacation during the year.

Forty per cent have water in the kitchen, but the other percent must go to the spring or the pump to bring the water for cooking breakfast. Thirty-six per cent help with the milking. On the average, the farm woman has a seven-room house to keep in order. Seventy-nine per cent have kerosene lamps to trim and fill.

Ninety-six per cent do the family washing, about half of them having washing machines and the other half doing the work with tub, wash board and boiler. Twenty-six per cent have gas or electric irons to make more comfortable the task of ironing. Ninety-two per cent do some or all of the family sewing. Garden work is done by 56 per cent, 94 per cent make all or part of the family bread and 69 per cent have churning to do.

Eighty-one per cent of all poultry stocks are cared for by women. One fourth of the farm women help to feed and bed the livestock, and 24 per cent of them spend over six weeks in the year assisting with some part of the field work. All of this in addition to cooking the family meals and caring for the children.

This, of course, is the dark side of the shield. It does not take into consideration the many compensations that come with the women's daily round of work for the comfort of her family, and anyone who has ever experienced the satisfaction of living in the open country knows that the average farm woman more fortunately placed than her average city sister. But the task is sufficiently grinding, as Miss Ward says, to send the farm woman to bed "breathing a prayer that her strength may be equal to tomorrow's duties."

What has the appearance of a tragedy in Seattle come to light in Ashland last night when Chief of Police J. W. Hatcher received a wire from the Seattle police stating that the dead body of Mrs. Clementine Cash had been found there. Identification had been made through a letter on the woman's person, alleged to have been written by her husband E. E. Cash of Ashland. The cause of her death is undetermined.

The latter, who came here before the Fourth of July celebration and had been employed at the Tavern Inn, was notified of the death of the woman, supposed to be his but knows nothing of the affair. He has telegraphed to a friend in Seattle to identify the dead woman and is awaiting word to learn if it is the body of his wife. He has been staying here awaiting his wife's arrival which was expected to be, after which they were going on to California.

According to the police Mrs. Cash came to Seattle several days ago and registered at the Planters hotel. The wire from the Seattle police stated that a man and the dead woman had registered at a hotel there Sunday night under the name of E. F. Jacobs and wife.

Mr. Cash says he is the woman's second husband, and that she has three daughters who are now living with their grandmother in San Francisco. Mrs. Cash is 34 years old, though she does not look older than 25. Mr. Cash stated in an interview. At one time, Mr. Cash said, he and his wife had to go to Alaska to get rid of the man Jacobs who had been following Mrs. Cash persistently.

According to Mr. Cash he arrived in Ashland the latter part of June, driving here from Portland in an auto, and his wife was to join him later. Both Mr. and Mrs. Cash for a while worked on one of the O. W. R. & N. boats and later worked at Bridal Veil for the lumber company there, where Mr. Cash had charge of the butcher shop. Mrs. Cash operating the boarding house for the company and one of the daughters, Dorothy, waiting on table.

Mr. Cash is positive in his opinion that his wife was given poison by Jacobs in order that he might gain his ends. When asked if his wife was given to melancholy or was of a morbid disposition Mr. Cash said she was always cheerful and planning for the future. That she stayed in Portland while he came here in order to see the Shrine convention and Rose Festival, and later went to Seattle to visit with friends before coming here to join Mr. Cash and go on to California where the three daughters are.

Mr. Cash will leave this evening for Seattle to investigate the death of his wife and claim the body.

GIRLS' FRIENDLY SOCIETY IS STARTED
Last Sunday morning, a part of the charter class of the Girl's Friendly society were admitted to membership by the chaplain, the Rev. P. K. Hammond, of Trinity Episcopal church. The new members are Catherine Hanson, Louise Hanson, Clara Will, Edith Dodge, Dorris Montgomery, Isabel Silver, Virginia Jones and Mrs. P. K. Hammond, as associate member and branch secretary. Other associates and probationers, who were not able to be present last Sunday, will be admitted at a later date.

ENTERTAIN GIRLS' CAMP WITH PICNIC
The members of the Girls' Conference were guests at a delightful picnic in the park last evening, given by the young women of Ashland. Tables were laid in the picnic grounds and were spread with everything to eat in the form of delicious cookery. At the close Miss Rhoda Burnett of Medford gave the vesper talk. About 60 were at this picnic and pronounced it one of the leading social events of the week.

This morning the conference girls had a "hare and hounds" breakfast served in the park. The starting point was from the tents, and the girls were compelled to follow the trail, which finally led to the camp grounds where the breakfast was served.

fast of bacon and eggs were most heartily enjoyed and appreciated. Every afternoon the girls are given some form of entertainment. They have had swimming matches in the canyon and excursions through the various industries, where the superintendents have been most courteous to their guests, showing them the workings of the plants and explaining the processes of the business.

The spirit attending the morning service has been unusually good, and the members of the camp feel that the teachings they have obtained this week will go far towards establishing the Ashland camp as a permanent annual feature.
