WHISKY SHIPPED TO JESSE WINBURN IS SEIZED HERE.—Ashland, Ore., June 1. — Three barrels of whisky shipped here from Minnesota to Jesse Winburn, a new arrival here, were seized today by deputy sheriffs and taken to the jail to be held pending disposal of the liquor under the federal prohibition law. The seizure was made by request of United States Commissioner Davis.

Mrs. Winburn was quoted as saying that he had owned the whisky before the dry law went into effect and that he had obtained a permit to move it from his old home in Minnesota. The question of his right to transport the liquor in interstate commerce will be threshed out by federal officials here and the case may be taken into court if no decision on the point is available and Mr. Winburn contests the seizure. The whisky was said to be worth several thousand dollars. — Thursday's Oregonian.

LITHIA PARK TENNIS COURT READY FOR MEET

The girls tennis class, organized since the closing of the school year, is making rapid strides in mastering the technique of the game, preparatory to taking part in the tennis tournament to be held at the Lithia Park tennis grounds in July, according to members of the committee promoting the interests of racket enthusiasts. The girls are practicing in Lithia Park Tuesday and Friday evenings of each week. The court is filled to capacity at each class meeting and the numbers in attendance are increasing at every practice game.

Owing to the small attendance at Wednesday's meeting of possible participants in the coming tournament at a meeting held last Wednesday plans of fixing up the Lithia Park tennis courts made for yesterday were deferred until next week when a larger attendance may be expected. That a larger number were not present at the meeting is thought to be because tennis players were not aware of the program being carried out to improve the court. The boys are expected to attend next week's meeting with shovels and to be prepared to shovel dirt and repair the court, which suffered for lack of care during the winter months.

If the boys do not turn out for the work in sufficient numbers it is thought that the support of the Parent Teachers association may be obtained. However, as the girls have promised to prepare a picnic dinner for the workers, it is thought that the boys will attend to their share of the work. The girls accuse the boys of lax enthusiasm because of the shovel proposition. A date will be set at the next practice game for doing the work.

ATTEMPT TO TURN DELIVERY OF MAIL TO CARRIER ROUTES

First Assistant Postmaster General Hubert Works is asking the postmasters of the United States to investigate their general delivery service and request residents of the town to either have their mail delivered by city letter carriers or rent lock boxes, according to Edwin J. Kaiser, Ashland postmaster.

The general delivery service is not intended for permanent residents who can either have mail delivered or rent a box. The campaign is welcomed by the Ashland post office as the tourist season crowds the general delivery facilities enormously. The price of a post office lock box is only 60c per quarter and the department regards that as reasonable enough for all residents who are not within the city carrier districts. The Ashland office is serving those concerned with an application card for the use of the general delivery. After these replies have been received, arrangements will be made for city delivery or post office lock boxes. The section of post office law governing the point reads as follows:

"The general delivery of post offices having carrier delivery service is intended for the use of only those patrons who are not permanently located or who can not, for good and sufficient reasons, receive mail by carrier or through a post office box. The general delivery should not be used where it is possible to receive mail otherwise. Persons intending to remain for 30 days or more in a city having carrier service should file their names and street addresses at the post office so that their mail may be delivered by carrier. Persons applying for mail at the general delivery window, if unknown may be required to prove their identity, and residents of the cities having carrier delivery may be required to furnish a statement as to name and address and reason for calling at the post office for mail instead of receiving it by carrier."

FORMER ASHLAND WOMAN DIES AT SALEM.

SALEM, Ore., June 3. — Mrs. E. B. Daugherty died at the Salem hospital, Salem, Oregon, Thursday morning, June 3d, after an illness of four weeks. After undergoing an operation on May 4, complications set in which necessitated a second but slight operation on May 19, after which she seemed to be doing nicely. A few days later new difficulties arose, and on June 1, her attending a front page newspaper publicity physician determined to risk the third, from which she died the following morning at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Daugherty was the wife of E. B. Daugherty, a postal clerk in the Salem post office, and was formerly Miss Ethel Drew, residing at 115 Fork street, Ashland, Oregon.

Tidings Carriers Strive to Achieve Business Success

MAXWELL J. HAWKES. During the past four years, Maxwell J. Hawkes, a Tidings route carrier, has earned enough to keep himself with spending money and bank $300 on a savings account. Lately Maxwell has been putting all his money in the bank. The bicycle on which he carries his paper route was purchased from his own earnings.

Maxwell J. Hawkes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Hawkes, 128 Factory street. He was born July 28, 1909, in Moscow, Idaho.

Maxwell is full of ambition. He states that his political affiliations are Democratic which is opposed to the politics of his father. At the age of 11 years, Maxwell has his life very well mapped out. After finishing a course at O. A. C. he intends to become a stock rancher. When school starts next fall Maxwell will be in the seventh grade at Junior high school.

In high school Maxwell will take manual training and study everything he can about agriculture. He goes in for athletics strong and plays third base on the Baptist Junior team.

Despite his diversified pleasures Maxwell is primarily an agriculturist. He has a garden which he attends to himself and raises beans as the chief product. Maxwell did not state the reason for his special liking for beans. During the war he had a "war garden" and competed for the prizes offered at that time.

Maxwell has a goat. In fact he has two goats, but he keeps them both tied at home. From the keeping of the goats Maxwell derives both pleasure and profit. He sells the goats milk to his father and adds the revenue to his growing bank account. Maxwell himself bought one of the goats. The other was given to him by his father.

GOOD PHILOSOPHY

The following comes anonymously to the Tidings. It shows the touch of genius and to read and heed:

I work at night
When regular folks
Are gone to bed.
And those
That hang around
Are nervous folks
And are always asking
Silly questions
And spending money.
A dreary life.
But sometimes
At midnight
A little girl
Of seven years
Goes tripping by
With a lunch pail
For her daddy
At the mill.
And always
She smiles at me
Through the window
And sometimes bestates
And waves her hand.
And I am tired
And old
And wrinkled
And gray.
And yet
She always smiles.
God gave us them
The little ones
To cheer us on the path
When our legs
Grow tottery
And old.
And yet
The world betrays them
As they grow
The little ones
That smile.

MICHIGAN MAN GIVES BOOST TO ASHLAND

Away back in Ypsilanti, Michigan, Ashland, its Chautauqua building and free auto camp, recently received story in the Daily Press of Ypsilanti. The article records the Pacific coast trip of William Turney who visited Ashland at the time and was shown about the city by Mayor C. B. Lamkin. Mayor Lamkin was forced to make a hurried sight-seeing trip with his guest as Mr. Williams had to catch a train east within thirty minutes from the time he started "to see Ashland." But according to the Ypsilanti Press that thirty minutes was enough to win laudatory praise from Mr. Williams for this city. The article follows:

"While Mr. Turney was enthusiastic over California, he also spoke quite at length about Oregon, mentioning especially Ashland. On his way home, he stopped in that city, and the treatment he received there made a favorable impression on him. They have a free parking system there for tourists, and every thing possible is done to make the visitors there feel at home. I went through a park where tourists camp and found them cooking their meals on little gas plates the gas being piped to the place and furnished by the city."

"There is a Chautauqua building there which seats 4200 and the seats in the building were made by the women of Ashland," Mr. Turney said.

"The thing which impressed Mr. Turney more than the parking system, or the Chautauqua building, was the hospitality of the people. He was a stranger in Ashland, and had only a short time in the city, but the mayor took him around in his car, showing him as much of the place as possible, and explaining to him just how the good work was accomplished, and finally took him to his train. 'That is the way to treat strangers,' Mr. Turney stated. 'If I ever go to Oregon again, I shall certainly visit Ashland, and so will other tourists who have been fortunate enough to go there.'"

Arrivals at the auto camp in Lithia Park and at the local hotels are increasing daily. Garages are doing a brisk business with the summer tourists and the hotels are taxing their capacity to the utmost for accommodation of guests who are arriving by every train, and motorists who are not camping out. Registration of hotel guests was especially heavy Sunday.

Recent arrivals at the Hotel Astoria are:

H. L. Monheimer, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. Kroth, C. B. Dawson, San Francisco; H. J. Thrall, Roseburg; Wm. C. Smith, Seattle, Wash.; James L. Dusenbury, Salem; Jno. E. Aitchison, W. H. COLORADO TEACHER IS SECURED FOR SUMMER SCHOOL

By G. A. BRISCOE

Homer Davis of Colorado Teachers' College, will teach at the Ashland summer school. Mr. Ruch of Stanford was to have the work in educational measures and psychology, but a change in plans at Stanford made it necessary for Mr. Ruch to remain there. On June 1, he and Dr. Treman began a piece of research work that will cover a period of 12 months and involve an expenditure of $20,000. While Southern Oregon regrets losing Mr. Ruch, as it lays some claim to him, he having been engaged in the local high school for three years, yet the summer school is fortunate in securing Mr. Davis.

Mr. Davis has had a large experience as a city superintendent. He has been a close student in psychology and educational measures in both the Indiana and Stanford Universities. It is expected he will bring to the members of his classes both the theory and practice of his important subjects.

Every teacher of Southern Oregon should avail himself of the opportunity of Mr. Davis' classes.

No matter how carefully the housewife may plan, it seems almost impossible to avoid an accumulation of stale bread, unless toast is a popular dish with the family.

When planning to use stale bread, usually plain toast, bread pudding and crumbs will be the only use thought practical, but there are many ways of preparing these leftovers, and with the price of living soaring each day, it is a willful waste to throw away even one piece of bread. Bread and milk is one of the cheapest of foods and is equally good for old or young, as it yields as much nutrition as more expensive foods and offers a very good way to use slightly stale bread, particularly if there are children to provide for.

To freshen a stale loaf of bread or rolls have the oven just moderately hot. Place the bread or rolls in an ordinary paper bag, twist the top firmly and place in the oven ten minutes or more. Be sure the oven is not hot enough to burn the paper bag. By this method stale bread or rolls will taste crisp and fresh.

This method is equally good for fresh rolls, coffee cakes, doughnuts, etc., which have been allowed to cool. Reheated this way they will never become hard and dry, but are preferred served hot. French toast offers an excellent way of using stale bread, and if fried in ham or bacon fat makes an excellent breakfast dish. When fried in butter or oil and served with jelly, jam or sprinkled with powdered sugar, French toast furnishes a hearty luncheon dish or a dinner dessert.

Practical Recipes For Use of Bread.

The following recipes are only a few suggestions for the use of stale bread. Bear in mind that bread combined with milk or butter forms a most nutritious and easily digested food. And when compared with other foods bread has very little waste.

Recipes

Note — All measurements are level and a half-pint measuring cup is used.

Bread Pudding

One cup bread crumbs, two cups milk, one-third cup sugar, two eggs, one cup seeded raisins, one teaspoon vanilla, grating of nutmeg. Scald milk and add crumbs and let soak for 20 minutes. Beat one egg and one yolk, add sugar, then add to milk and bread; flavor and add raisins and sprinkle top with nutmeg. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake slowly until firm. Beat white of egg until dry, then add gradually two tablespoons of sugar. Spread the top of the pudding with jelly and jam, then put meringue on top and return to a slow oven to brown.

Cocoanut Bread Pudding

Follow above receipt, using one cup of cocoanut in place of the raisins.

English Monkey

One cup bread crumbs, one cup milk, one egg, two-thirds cup soft cheese cut fine, one-half teaspoon salt, paprika and cayenne. Soak bread crumbs in milk until soft. Heat, add cheese and stir until melted, then add beaten egg and seasonings; cook about five minutes, stirring constantly. Pour over toasted crackers.

Bread Sauce

For Game or Fowl.

One and one-half cups milk, two-thirds cup bread crumbs, one small onion, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoons butter, pepper, two cloves.

Put milk in double boiler, add onion stuck with cloves and half of the bread crumbs. Cook twenty minutes; remove onion, add seasonings and butter and remainder of crumbs. Serve at once.

Bread and Butter Puddings

Spread six half-inch slices of bread with butter. Place the slices in a baking dish with the buttered side down and sprinkle generously with raisins. Scald two cups of milk; beat two eggs, add half cup of sugar and pour the hot milk over the beaten egg mixture; flavor with one teaspoon of vanilla and pour over the bread; cover and bake in a moderate oven about twenty minutes. Serve with a caramel sauce.

Bread Omelet

One-half cup bread crumbs, one-third cup milk, three eggs, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon butter. Soak bread crumbs in milk for about ten minutes. Beat eggs until creamy, combine mixtures and season. Melt butter in a heated frying pan, pour in the egg mixture and cook until delicately browned underneath. Then place in a hot oven to brown on top. Cut half way through the middle, spread with butter, fold and serve. A tomato or white sauce may be served with this omelet when used for a luncheon dish.

PRESBYTERIANS WIN GAME FROM METHODIST TEAM

(Contributed)

The Presbyterian Juniors demonstrated their supremacy in baseball for the season of 1921 by "licking" the Methodists today in the final game by 19 to 14. Several of the regular players in both teams were unable to participate and this probably accounts for the large size score—also indicating that even a boy will sometimes work when he would like to play. These teams have been running pretty even all through the series and the Juniors of the Presbyterian persuasion are justly proud of their success, which entitles them to the pennant for this season. The C-C's and Methodists and Baptists claim that they have had a lot of fun even though they didn't beat up the world and that incidentally the Presbyterians have had to sit up and take notice that there were some other youngsters who could play ball a little bit.

400 CHILDREN ENTERTAINED BY JESSE WINBURN

and dozens of boxes of crackerjack had been circulating around. But, anyway, the grown folks said to line up and of course everybody did. It was strawberry shortcake with whipped cream and ice cream and angel food cake and all kinds of little cakes dressed up in colored icing by the wooden boxes full. There was hot chocolate and sandwiches of so many kinds we can't remember and all-day suckers and chewing gum—EVERYTHING.

Chucked full of joy the party all started homeward singing with the carefree spirit of childhood and shouting back farewells to the host. Some of the tiniest, for the ages begun at six you know, just bubbled over with appreciation of their host who knew how to give a really truly party and up and hugged him and said from that day he was their "Uncle Jesse." Some one who has known Mr. Winburn a good many years remarked that he loved children. It looked at the party as if he had started a lot of little hearts in Rogue River valley beating with affection for him.

Such a perfectly planned party it was, too. Mrs. Swendenburg was general manager assisted by ladies from Ashland, Medford, and Jacksonville.

Mrs. Jarvis had charge of the chaperon committee and rode up on horseback to make sure nobody tumbled out on the way and missed the party.

Around Town Gossip

In Park and on the long stretches of gravel paths bordered with riotous, blooming shrubs, much to the amusement of the chattering squirrels who live unmolested in this park. Joyfully, gratefully these skipping ones are doing the publicity stunt for Ashland's mineral waters. Many's the rheumatic mortal on a park bench who glimpsing the hilarious one, questions and on information goes and does likewise.

The patient coming for medical attention is assured of the best. Besides a number of physicians keeping up with modern methods there is the Granite City hospital situated on the boulevard in a quiet secluded spot. The Ashland sanitarium is located a half block from Main street. Here is a complete X-ray laboratory and facilities for clinical and pathological purposes. The surgeon in charge, Dr. George O. Jarvis, was formerly demonstrator in anatomy in the University of Pennsylvania. City Has Industries.

A number of railroad men's families live here and the Southern Pacific has a big payroll at this point. The Ashland Iron Works carries a large payroll and has recently taken over the manufacture of the Mora pump for the Western trade. The climate, freedom from labor troubles, possibility of establishing a commodity rate, less overhead, nearness to Portland to get pig iron, and the capacity of the plant brought this addition to Ashland industries. The Swift Produce company has a wholesale house.

The Blair Granite Works quarries the best granite on the Pacific coast and equal to the famous Vermont output. There is a modern creamery, ice manufacturing plant, box factory, planing mill, modern laundry and several bakeries. The Standard and Union Oil companies have gasoline stations. There is a garage in most every other block, also poultry ranches, and truck gardens, a greenhouse which ships to Northern California and Southern Oregon; the largest department store between Portland and Sacramento, many attractive and up-to-date mercantile and grocery stores and confectionery parlors.

One of the most artistic theatres in Southern Oregon with a $15,000 pipe organ, shows first run motion pictures.

There are restaurants and hotels which cater to the tourist and three banks with an aggregate deposit of $1,640,000.

The foreigner is almost an unknown quantity. Ashland is 100 per cent American.

Playgrounds Provided.

In Lithia Park are extensive playgrounds under a supervisor in summer, with tennis courts and croquet grounds. Band concerts are given there. Gas plates under shelter are provided for picnic parties which come by hundreds from all over Southern Oregon. Every Fourth of July a monster celebration is staged attended by visitors into the 50,000. Electric lights are strung through the trees in park and auto camp.

The spirit of civic pride which has prompted so many pioneers to give valuable property for public purposes has been a factor in making Ashland a city beautiful. The energizing uplift of the mountains and the soft music of tumbling streams are daily reminders of the beauty and purpose of life.
