FORMER ASHLAND EDITOR DIES IN COLO.

Many Ashland residents will be grieved to learn of the death at Granada, Colo., May 31 of T. F. Kershaw, formerly of this city. For a number of years, dating from about 1905, Mr. Kershaw was city editor of the Tidings. He was very highly esteemed in business, social and church circles here, generally recognized as a man of splendid character and ability.

The following details are from the Granada, Colo., Leader of June 2:

T. F. Kershaw, former editor of the Granada Leader, a highly respected citizen of the town, died at his home in Granada, Wednesday, night, May 31, 1922. Mr. Kershaw was forced to discontinue all business activities last January on account of a leakage in his heart and in the hopes that complete rest would improve this condition, but he has grown steadily worse and passed away at 9 o'clock Wednesday night.

Theodore P. Kershaw was born in Centerville, Michigan, March 29, 1861. His father, a minister of the Gospel, moved with his family to New York and New Jersey and later back to Michigan. When 16 years old he entered the newspaper business in which he continued most of his active life.

In early life Mr. Kershaw joined the Presbyterian church and has always been a consistent supporter and an active worker in the church wherever he lived. His special interest was the Sunday school, being superintendent of Sunday schools in Ashland, Portland and Newport, Or., Salinas, Calif., and at Granada.

The Ashland chamber of commerce wants to make a big day for Ashland at the opening of the Caves, as it will afford a splendid opportunity for boosting our own Fourth of July celebration. With this end in view, it is hoped arrangements can be made to have a crowd on hand to go to Grants Pass, so as to make an imposing parade of an Ashland delegation with banners, flags, etc., inviting all of Grants Pass to our celebration on Ford and Fourth days. The Grants Pass band has already accepted the invitation to compete in the band contest on the Fourth of July.

WHERE IS OREGON'S BEST INTEREST?

would be the point nearest to the Oregon boundary. Tehama is 191 miles away. Thus the Southern Pacific, with 1300 miles of railroad in the state of Oregon, would be separated from Southern Pacific in the state of California by a distance of nearly 200 miles.

3. If this separation had no other effect, it would tend to deprive Oregon of its most valuable single item of business, for the Southern Pacific now is able to buy its supply of ties, timbers and other forest products very largely from producers on its lines in Oregon. If unable to reach these producers except by paying freight to another carrier, this important business would easily go elsewhere, and it amounts to many millions of dollars a year.

4. Such a separation would deprive Oregon of its chief source of car supply. The people on our lines in Oregon rely on the Southern Pacific for cars, having never yet been able to get any supply from any line east of Portland except for a small fraction of their wants. Even during federal control the United States railroad administration found every resource to fail except the Southern Pacific for our Oregon lines car supply.

Remember that in 1921 the Southern Pacific sent northward to Ashland for its lines in Oregon, over 34,000 empties, in addition to over 24,000 loaded cars. At Portland we received no addition to our car supply, on the contrary, in 1921 the Southern Pacific actually delivered to its rail connections there 1760 cars in excess of cars we received from them at Portland.

5. Suggestion has been made that by some plan the 191 mile gap in California between Southern Pacific in California and Southern Pacific in Oregon might be bridged under joint rights of ownership. This merely substitutes some uncertain rights of ownership for direct ownership. It is a confession that troublesome dual substitutes would have to be attempted to take the place of that single ownership and responsibility to which the public is accustomed.

Every shipper knows what it means to deal with two carriers on any given question of service compared with dealing with one carrier, other conditions equal. As a business question, everyone knows that when the business on and over a given piece of railroad is split between two carriers, neither has in
