Did you ever stop to think and consider the phenomenal growth the thriving little city of Echo has made within the past three and one-half years, and of the many improvements and substantial buildings that have been erected during that time. It was January 1, 1906, that the editor cast his lot among the then very few inhabitants of Echo and began the publication of the Echo Register. At that time the country hereabouts was a barren sagebrush desert, the home of the jackrabbit and coyote; but there was then talk of irrigation and it was destined that these sagebrush plains should be dotted with beautiful homes, producing orchards and waving fields of alfalfa and grain. Along with the development of our agricultural lands the little town of Echo prospered and steadily and permanently grew until now it is in the full enjoyment of metropolitan ways and commercial prestige, being one of the main shipping and distributing points of Eastern Oregon.

January 1, 1906, there were in Echo only a few scattered dwellings and the following business houses: W. H. Boyd, the pioneer merchant; E. E. Ripper, merchant; Hotel Echo; John Dorn, drug store; Echo Lumber Company; Bank of Echo; Louis Scholl, Jr., insurance and real estate; Jones livery stable; Bennett & Spike, livery stable, now William Barker; Ben Gillette, blacksmith shop; F. L. Brundage, barber shop; Glassons Resort and Confectionery; F. M. Godfrey, furniture, now conducted by the Echo Furniture Co.; C. A. Gilbert, barber shop, C. R. Bonney, harness and saddles; Henrietta Milling & Grain Company; Dr. Dorn, Dr. Ackley, L. A. Esteblawyer, six saloons.

A MATCH RACE.

A match 300-yard race was run on the track near Stanfield, Sunday last, between the Tobe Thornton bay horse, owned by Levy Fanning, and Wm. Barker sorrel horse. Several hundred people attended and over $500 changed hands on the result. The horses were tapped off even, the Thornton horse taking the lead and coming out an easy winner with twenty feet of daylight between the two. This was the third match race between the two horses, the Thornton horse being the winner each time. Starter, C. R. Lisle; starting judges, I. W. Durrill and E. H. Stewart; outcome judges, Glenn McCullough and Henry Taylor. Everybody was satisfied.

FROM ALBERTA.

Frank Rex, of Wainwright, Alberta, Canada, arrived in Echo Tuesday and has been busy this week shaking hands with old friends. He was one of the old pioneers of this section and at one time was the owner of the S. D. L. Ross ranch, about two miles below town. Frank left here three years ago and says he can notice many improvements that were made during his absence.

SERIOUS RUNAWAY.

Last Saturday while A. H. Sunderman and Mrs. Haynerd and son were coming down from Pendleton to their ranch on Butter creek, and when just about home, their team became frightened and ran away. The rig was turned over, throwing the occupants to the ground. Mrs. Haynerd had her left arm broken between the elbow and wrist, Mr. Sunderman received a few bruises and the boy luckily escaped with hardly a scratch. Dr. Dorn was called and dressed their wounds.

WATER RIGHT CASES

The water right cases of the Henrietta Flouring Mill Company vs. Joseph Cunha, and the Allen Ditch Company vs. the Henrietta Milling Company are attracting much local interest among water users and the outcome will be eagerly watched. The mills are represented by Carey & Kerr and Harrison Allen of Portland, Phelps & Steiner of Pendleton and R. R. Johnson of Hermiston, while the other side is represented by Raley & Raley and Lowell & Winter of Pendleton.
