IRRIGATION PROJECT

Stanfield, Umatilla County, Oregon

This enterprise is the outcome of the creative genius of the Hon. W. J. Furnish, of Pendleton, Umatilla County, Oregon.

Mr. Furnish is one of Oregon's greatest business men. He is without doubt the greatest wheat raiser in Oregon. He has always been noted for his cool, careful and reliable judgment.

In the prime of life, forty-five years of age, and after forty years residence on the Umatilla River, he formulated the Project, bought largely of its lands, and built the great Furnish canals, carrying water to its thirsty plains. With Mr. Furnish as its father, it was from the first certain that the project was a winner.

Later, when the lands were ready for the market, he selected as a partner and half owner, an Oregon man who had demonstrated his ability to make things move, Dr. Henry Waldo Coe, of Portland, Oregon. To Dr. Coe is due the credit for the Coe Reservoir.

The great FURNISH CANALS, with the lands back of them, 10,000 acres in all, and the COE RESERVOIR, make up the FURNISH-COE PROJECT.

COE RESERVOIR

WORK IS PROGRESSING WITH ALL SPEED UPON THIS STRUCTURE

By a nicely balanced arrangement between the owners, Mr. Furnish has charge of the physical side of the enterprise, building and maintenance, while Dr. Coe has the responsibility for the land sales. Under this nice adjustment of responsibility and work, conditions have been, and are progressing, as smoothly as ever they have done in any similar enterprise anywhere.

With ample means to do whatever should be necessary to do, there has been a steady growth of the enterprise and the land sale has been very rapid.

IN A FEW MONTHS THESE LANDS WILL ALL BE SOLD
