The Telephone Girl.

The telephone girl sits still in her chair and listens to voices from everywhere, she hears all the gossip, she hears all the news, she knows who is happy and who has the blues, she knows all our sorrows, she knows all our joys, she knows every girl who is chasing the boys, she knows all our troubles, she knows of our strife, she knows every man that talks mean to his wife, she knows every time we are with the boys, she knows the excuses each fellow employs, she knows every woman who has a dark past, she knows every man who is inclined to be fast, in fact, there's a secret 'neath each saucy curl of that quiet, demure looking telephone girl. If the telephone girl told all that she knows it would turn our friends into bitterest foes, she could sow a small wind that would soon be a gale, engulf us in trouble and land us in jail, she could let go a story which, gaining in force, would cause half our wives to sue for divorce, she could get all our churches mixed up in a fight and turn all our days into sorrowful nights; in fact she could keep the whole town in a stew if she'll tell a tenth part of the things that she knew. Oh! brother, now doesn't it make your head whirl when you think what you owe to the telephone girl?—Vernon (Tex.) Call.

450 POUNDS WEDDED.

Emil Schrauner and Mary J. Beecher, both of Walla Walla county, Ore., were married by Judge Brents at the court house yesterday afternoon.

The bride and groom joked each other and the court house officials who witnessed the marriage, as she weighed close to 300 pounds, and is larger proportionately than he, who weighs near 150.

"We looked good to each other and decided to be married," they said and got as much fun out of it as any one.—Walla Walla Bulletin.

NUMEROUS REALTY DEALS ARE MADE

ENTERPRISE REAL ESTATE MEN BUSY—RANCHES AND CITY PROPERTY SOLD.

Anson Woods and W. S. Paine of Weston, Oregon, purchased last week the W. H. Holmes ranch on Trout Creek, through the agency of J. B. Seibert, manager of the New Era Land company.

The consideration was $9000. The ranch is what is known as a dry hill ranch and contains 360 acres. There was 70 acres which produced on an average 45 bushels of fall wheat to the acre this season. It was farmed this year by C. P. Ragsdale.

O. R. & I. Deals.
The O. R. & I. company engineered a number of land deals last week. Daniel Boyd purchased the W. W. Harris 160 acre wheat ranch, 6 miles north west of town. Three lots in Alder View addition were sold for Mr. Boyd to W. W. Harris, one lot in Alder View to L. E. Jordan and two lots to Wm. H. McPetridge.

The same company sold the Wm. H. McPetridge 80-acre ranch on Alder Slope to W. W. Harris for $6000 or $75 an acre, and Mr. Harris' 60 acre ranch on Alder Slope was transferred to Mr. McPetridge.

C. E. Vest has sold for Roger Kay the latter's lot on West Greenwood street to S. D. Keltner for $150.

J. D. Halsey has bought two lots in Birchland addition from C. E. Funk for $225. Clarence E. Vest made the deal.

PASTOR CLIMBS TO EAGLE CAP SUMMIT

REV. SAMUEL HARRIS MAKES JOURNEY TO MOUNTAINS ALONE FROM THIS CITY.

Rev. Samuel Harris, pastor of the Enterprise Presbyterian Church, without companion or guide except his past experience in mountain climbing, went up Hurricane canyon, Monday, and Tuesday crossed the saddle and B. C. basin and made the ascent to the summit of Eagle Cap, the famed giant of the Powder River mountains, and the highest peak in Eastern Oregon.

Mr. Harris returned to Enterprise Wednesday none the worse of his 40 mile mountain journey and full of satisfaction at having scaled the highest and most noted mountain peak between the Rockies and Cascades. He also resolved to his satisfaction several disputed points. Mr. Harris is convinced there are no glaciers around Eagle Cap. On the north side is an immense snow bank and the sun shining on the center of that gives a glacier like appearance to one on top of the mountains around Wallawa Lake.

Mr. Harris says Marble Mountain in Hurricane Canyon is by far the most beautiful of all the sights up the canyon. When the saddle is crossed and you behold the wonderful basin of lake, with their velvety frame of green, the great snow banks toppling into their edge, and all flanked and surrounded by majestic peaks, the scene is beautiful beyond description. Mr. Harris counted 11 lakes and he says each one is a gem with its own individual beauty or characteristic.

Mr. Harris crossed the basin to the foot of the peak, then turned to the right (west) and made the ascent from that direction. The climb is not hazardous and not especially difficult, calling, at the most, for only plenty of muscle.

Under a cairn of stone on the very summit, he found a pickle bottle, in which written on cards and plainly visible through the glass were these memoranda:

"First reading 11 a. m., Sept. 15, 1907, Fred W. Colville, botanist, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. Aneroid reading, 9860 feet. In company with Arthur W. Sampson."

"Second aneroid reading, 10:45 a. m., August 26, 1909, 9800 feet, Arthur W. Sampson, U. S. Forest Service. Timber line approximately 9300 feet."

If the foregoing readings are approximately correct, they should set at rest the old dispute of Eagle Cap's height. The last reading was made just six days before Mr. Harris was at the summit.

Rev. Harris is no novice at mountain climbing. He has explored the loftiest peaks of the Alps and knows a glacier when he meets one. The unattended trip up the canyon and ascent of the peak were more of a pleasure than a hardship to him and the journey was made all the more pleasant by kindly hospitality offered by the herders at the several sheep camps he came upon. He did not see a wild animal on the trip.

OAK LEAF DIET KILLS CATTLE IN SOUTHWEST

The stockmen grazing their cattle on the National Forests in the Southwest, especially in Colorado and New Mexico, have suffered serious losses during the present summer through the cattle eating oak leaves.

In that section of the country the season has been unusually dry and grass extremely scarce. To eke out the scanty forage supply, the cattle have browsed heavily on the scrub oak which covers large portions of the range. Ordinarily the stock does not browse much on the oak and the little they do get, taken with the other food, is not injurious, but when, as in the present season, the oak browse furnishes a large proportion of the daily food of the cattle, the results are serious.

The oak leaves and sprouts contain a large percentage of tannic acid. The action of this acid on the stomach is extremely injurious and the losses have been unusually severe. The symptoms of the disease are staring eyes, feverish and blistered lips and nose, the animal ceases to graze or seek for food, standing in one place for hours at a time. The coat becomes rough and the hair is

W. IRVING WROTE OF WAY-LEE-WAY

FIRST AMERICAN LITERARY MAN TOLD OF THE BEAUTIES OF WALLAWA.

In connection with the article on the origin of the name Wallawa, published in the last issue of this paper, the following letter in the La Grande Star will be of interest:

Editor Morning Star: With every other eastern Oregonian I am very greatly interested in anything pertaining to the early history of the region in which we live; a region so intensely interesting that it has well nigh become the cynosure of all eyes. The article appearing in the Sunday Morning Star on the origin of the name Wallawa is the one to which I have special reference.

The reader of Washington Irving's classic American sketches has not failed to notice what that master in the art of description has to say of this enchanted realm in his volume entitled "Adventures of Captain Bonneville." An epitome of the story is this: Captain Bonneville was going westward to Fort "Wallah-Wallah," having followed the Port Neud from old Fort Hall (now Pocatello) and down the Snake to the mouth of Gun (now Powder) river, there, thinking a nearer way possible, he left the main stream of the Snake and came up Gun river to the Grande Ronde valley. Here are his words:

"At length plunging and passing through a succession of snowdrifts, they reached a valley known among trappers as the 'Grand Ronde,' which they found entirely free from snow; this is a beautiful valley about 20 miles long and 5 or 6 broad; a bright cold stream called the Fourche de Glace or Ice river runs through it. Its sheltered situation embosomed in the mountains renders it good pasturing ground in the winter time; after passing the night in the valley the travelers in the morning scaled the neighboring hills, to look for a more eligible route than the one on which they had so unluckily fallen; and, after much reconnoitering, determined to make their way once more to the (Snake) river."

Here they were almost in sight of Walla Walla, but returned to the inhospitable Snake.

Well reaching the great river, they had a terrible winter of it. On they went, crossing and recrossing the river, killing their horses to make boats of their skins, till at last they climbed out and over into the Imnaha (now Imnaha) country and on over to the Grande Ronde river. It seemed that the trappers had reckoned that the stream formed by the joining of the Wallawa and the Fourche de Glace took the name of the former, for they called it the Way-lee-way.

Here the king of American litterateurs: "The Way-lee-way, down the banks of which Captain Bonneville
