The King's Business

The evangelistic meetings are growing in depth and intensity. The Spirit of God's manifest in mighty power. A vital factor is the right atmosphere in which to work. No minister, church or evangelist can accomplish the largest results without it. Our Lord required it in His ministry. Once upon a time He declared that He could do no mighty works there because of the people's unbelief.

The right atmosphere for a successful revival will come as soon as God's people are in the spirit of prayer. Several cottage prayer-meetings were held last Thursday morning in which the presence of God was expressly manifest. Such a spirit of prayer is sure to be accompanied by a harvest.

The afternoon services have been greatly encouraged by the closing of the stores. The Bible expositions have been exceedingly instructive and helpful. To many the Old Book is truly becoming a New Book. Its treasures of truth are being unfolded to the eager listener in breadth, depth and clearness such as we have never known before.

Many have confessed Christ this week which is cause for devout thankfulness. Much earnest prayerful personal work is being done. The laborers in the harvest are returning with rejoicing, bearing precious sheaves.

USE OF SYMPTOMS.

Symptoms are but indications of disease, and disease but further indications of lowered vitality. Foreboding lowering temperature has accomplished nothing for the good of the patient for obvious reasons. Nature is out of balance, and I am convinced that many fatal results are from meddling interference with drugs which still further disturb equilibrium and bring about untimely dissolution.

How the Osteopath Works.

The osteopath attempts to hold in check any untoward symptom which may predominate and bolster up the fagged organ which is struggling, and in time nature regains her hold and health returns.

Much time may be spent in some point of differential diagnosis and loud cackling result when at last the thing has a name, but even with this result are they any nearer a cure? The osteopath loses no time over a name, for the cause of the condition is usually at his fingers' tips at once and repair begins at the same time.—Herald of Osteopathy.

"When Dr. Cook sighted land," says a contemporary, "his heart bulged with emotions." And when Peary sighted the headlines, his vocabulary bulged with invectives.

NINE HUNDRED AND NINE MILES OVERLAND

sisted of a sage hen, which Mr. Littleton killed.

September 14th we started through a desert, traveling 35 miles before we could find water, also a postoffice called Egli.

September 15th we started through the desert again and travelling 30 miles we camped. Here we found an alkali lake which is known to be very poisonous. Being still in the desert, we found a spring of good water near this lake, which seemed very strange to not have alkali in it. The spring is very large; had been tested 600 feet and didn't find bottom, so we were told. The country all around here was hilly, sage brush and alkali.

September 16th we moved on 20 miles for noon, before finding water. After noon we traveled along a very large lake which looked very nice, and had very nice scenery along its banks, but the country surrounding it was a desert. This lake was 20 miles long. We drove 40 miles that day, which was a very hard drive but we had to, to get good water. We drove until 9 o'clock at night before reaching it and were all nearly frozen, tired out, sleepy, and too worn out to get supper, so we all crawled into bed, and by morning we were all as hungry as a bunch of wolves. When breakfast was called all were ready to eat except Mr. Davis, who was very interested in fishing. By the time we were all through eating, he came up with one little old cat fish, about 5 inches long, and all mouth; it was so ugly one of the girls grabbed it out of his hands and threw it back, so he didn't have one. He might as well not have had any as that little old lonely thing. We soon started on and arrived in Lake View about four o'clock and camped. Here we had all kinds of company, Indians, Irishmen, Dagoes, Japs and negroes. They all seemed to have something to make them quite jolly as they railed all night. Lake View is situated at the head of Goose Lake. This valley is very pretty, and abundance of hay is raised there. Goose Lake is 35 miles long and 15 miles wide. 15 miles of it is in Oregon and the remainder extends into California. The elevation here at the head of the lake is 5,400 feet. Brant, geese, and ducks abound on the lake. The Shewalkan river is supported by the lake. While this is a very productive place it is devoid of market, being 45 miles from the nearest railroad.

September 18th we traveled down the west shore of the lake to Pine Creek, a little village situated on the California line. Here we found ourselves 435 miles from our starting point. Here the old horse—which Mr. Davis purchased from Jim Dalley of Enterprise, became so lame and was also a hard looker anyway, that we decided to leave him, so we had to give him away and buy another one. Mr. Davis said he had better give him away while he could, for fear he would die on him, and he couldn't even leave him on anyone's property.
