DEATH RECORD.

Judge H. E. Courtney of Baker City died at his home there, January 17, after a long illness of heart trouble. He is survived by his widow and a son, and also by a brother, Dr. H. A. Courtney of Portland.

The deceased was a native of Ireland. He came to Baker City something over 20 years ago, and was for many years prominent in the Baker bar. During the days of the democratic-populist fusion he was elected district attorney for Baker, Union and Wallowa counties and was successful as a prosecutor.

Ethel May Washburn was born at Argyle, Lee county, Iowa, February 26, 1876, and was married there in 1893, to S. D. Cox. She contracted lung disease some years ago, and in hopes of benefiting her health the family has moved from place to place in the Northwest. They have been residing in Enterprise about two months, Mr. Cox following his trade of painter.

Mrs. Cox passed away Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Funeral was from the home Friday at 2:30 p. m. Rev. C. E. Trueblood officiating. Besides the husband she leaves four children, the oldest a boy of 15 years and the youngest a baby only one year old.

BLOCKADE RAISED; TRAFFIC RESUMED.

Elgin train derailed.

For the first time in the history of the Joseph line, a complete tieup resulted. Friday evening the trains transferred at a point two miles east of Elgin. Saturday two engines and a mail car broke through the drift, reaching Elgin, but the other cars were derailed, and it was announced that the track would be cleared by 12:30 in the afternoon. As it was impossible to transfer, traffic was of course stalled until the coaches were righted again.

It is in the cut at the Galloway place that all the trouble has taken place. The snow troubles are all practically over, unless another hard wind sets in, and as soon as the cars were re-railled, traffic was resumed on the branch.

Tobacco Smoke.

The body is a factory of poisons, says a big pathologist. These poisons are constantly being poured out at the rate of eight pounds a day. One-third of all these poisonous excreta passes through the lungs in the form of steam or vapor. The lungs within their comparatively small compass contain a folded surface of about 1,600 square feet, in area equal to the floor of a room forty feet square. It is through this surface that the oxygen is drawn into the body and the poisonous carbon dioxide thrown off. Smoke in reality is nothing more or less than a cloud of fine carbon dust—soot. And when this dust comes into contact with the surface of the lungs it forms a thin coating which obstructs the entrance of oxygen laden air as well as the exit of the poisonous outbreathings. The smoker or he who inhales smoke either directly or by sitting in a smoke laden atmosphere is both starved and poisoned—starved for oxygen, the most important of all the foods, and poisoned by his own excreted waste.—Chicago Tribune.

The Source.

Assum—That little boy of yours seems to be nervous. Does he inherit it from you? Henpeck—I guess so. He certainly did not get it from his mother, for she's got more nerve than ever.
