Where It Rains Every Day.
There is a group of islands to the south of New Zealand called "The Sisters," which are said to be subjected to a practically constant rainfall. The same may be said of the islands and mainland of Terra del Fuego, save for the difference that the rain often takes the form of sleet and snow. On a line running round the world from four to eight or nine degrees there are patches over which rain seldom ceases to fall. This is called the "zone of constant precipitation," but at the same time there are several localities along with it with very little rainfall.

An instance of the advance in realty values in Portland during the past 50 years was brought up this week when the corner at Fifth and Morrison streets sold for $105 and an additional $110,000 was paid for the transfer of the leases. Peter W. Severson, who sold the property owned it for 51 years. It was literally forced upon him as apparently of little value. He was then owed a week's wages by the owner of the property, who also borrowed Severson's shotgun and lost it. The man who held the lot offered the property in lieu of the week's wages and the missing weapon. Severson demurred but finally was forced to accept the lot to cover the double debt.

Eskimo Courtship.

If European death scenes astonish, the consenting "Yes" of a bride at marriage shocks an Eskimo woman. Not only must a bride show herself unconsenting; she must, if she respects herself and tribal traditions, scream and struggle with all her might when her wooer or his envoy enters her family residence and, laying hold upon her, drags her, usually by the topknot, to her new home. She may be presented with a new lamp and water pail by her bridegroom, and she is as a general thing mightily pleased at her change of estate. But she is far too circumspect to show her pleasure or affection and keeps up a noisy demonstration until she feels that she has done all that a well bred maiden should do. If she does not exercise proper discrimination in this matter her lord sometimes scratches the soles of her feet so that she cannot run away to her parents.—Harper's Bazar.

organizations in the fruit growing districts was solicited. This is the extent of the movement which the Spokane Chamber of Commerce has unjustly called an effort to "rob" that city of the Apple Show. Seattle's whole interest in the matter is to keep the show in the Northwest, where it will best serve the welfare of all sections.

Train dispatching by telephone instead of telegraph is the latest improvement installed by the Great Northern on its line between Minneapolis and Seattle. The Spokane Division, extending from Troy, Mont. to Leavenworth, Wash., is being equipped for this service, which is far superior to the old method. The mechanism is simple and reduces to a minimum the danger of wrecks and congested conditions of former days, chargeable to telegraph dispatching.

The Anti-Saloon League does not believe the time is ripe to try to oust the liquor business from large cities in the Northwest, according to Rev. W. J. Herwig, newly appointed State Superintendent of Idaho. He says that the League advised against trying to win at Walla Walla and North Yakima, where defeats were sustained, but undertook the fight only on the instance of the local prohibitionists. "The league is not trying to close the Saloons in Spokane, Tacoma and Seattle," he continued, "not yet, but in five years the time will be ripe." Superintendent Herwig says he has hopes of seeing Idaho go dry within a short time because the women-vote there.

On the eve of the Ballinger Pinchot investigation by Congress, Major J. E. Ballaine of Seattle has asked the Government for lease of 5,000 acres of land in the Matanuska coalfield in Alaska. He offers to pay a royalty of fifty cents a ton on all fuel mined. Such an arrangement, it is figured, would net the government $2,000,000 on the deposits in question. Ballaine was the originator of the Alaska Central railway project, out of Seward, which recently went through foreclosure proceedings. The opening of these coal-fields are of great importance to the Northwest, offering a new supply of fuel.

The Widow Was Comforted.
"There is no accounting for the construction which some people will put upon certain passages of Scripture," remarked a clergyman. "I remember the story of one clergyman who went to call on a woman whose husband had recently died. He had expected quite naturally, to find her heartbroken with the burden of her sorrow and was greatly surprised when she greeted him with a very happy smile and ushered him into the parlor.

"Well—er—sister," he said at length, "you have my warmest sympathy."
"Thank you, doctor," replied the widow casually. "I did feel very bad, very bad indeed. But I came across a verse of Scripture which comforted me very much indeed."
"And what was the verse, sister?" inquired the clergyman.
"I don't remember just where to find it," replied the widow, "but it was made up of only four words—four helpful words—'Why need I care?'"

The Shrewd Banker.
Thirteen years ago a banker lent a farmer $1,000 with which to buy stock. The farmer, of course, gave his note. The borrower lost on the stock deal and had hard luck generally, so he couldn't pay the note. Later he went away, and after many years he made good again and returned. The banker tried to collect his note, but it was outlawed by a lapse of thirteen years. One day the banker stopped at the man's farm and admired his fine pumpkins. The farmer made him a present of two large ones.

"I'll just credit these pumpkins on your old note," the banker said.
"All right," the farmer said.
That revived the obligation. The banker brought suit and recovered in full for the note and interest.—Kansas City Star.

Life's Limits.
All indications point to the fact that less than ten miles below our feet a red heat is maintained permanently and within twenty a white heat. Ten miles above us we have the pitiless cold, far below zero, of interplanetary space. To what a narrow zone of delicately balanced temperature life is confined?

PARADISE.

Turner's Little Afterthought.
An English critic's reference to Turner's fine picture "The Wreck Buoy" reminds a faithful newspaper reader of a curious anecdote in connection with it. When Turner first sent this picture to the Royal Academy it was hung among several brilliantly colored pictures. On varnishing day Turner found the effect of his dull gray rendering of a stormy sea altogether spoiled by its bright surroundings. Without a moment's hesitation he painted in the lighted buoy in the foreground, and its dab of crimson light showed so brilliantly in its gloomy setting that Turner's picture became the prominent one, and its rivals on each side were cast into the shade. It is curious, if true, that the most noticeable feature of the picture should have been an afterthought.—Boston Transcript.
