

DOGS QUARANTINED FOR THREE MONTHS

STATE VETERINARIAN LYTLE ISSUES ORDER COVERING ALL WALLAWA COUNTY.

William H. Lytle of Pendleton, state veterinarian, spent Thursday here investigating the reports about rabies in dogs, coyotes and other animals. He found enough to cause him to issue the following:

State of Oregon, Department of State Veterinarian.

Order No. 4.

On and after the date of December 20th, 1910, all domestic dogs and cats owned and held within Wallawa county, Oregon, will be placed under quarantine and will not be permitted to be moved from the above stated Wallawa county, Oregon, except by permission of the State Veterinarian. This order is not to be construed as such as to prevent the use of dogs by owners of livestock, but all animals when not being used in the herding, driving or handling of livestock must be either muzzled or held in such a manner that contact cannot be had with other dogs or animals. Quarantine is hereby placed against the removal of any domestic dog, cat or wild animal from Wallawa county, Oregon, to any other county or section of the State of Oregon, except by permission of the State Veterinarian. This quarantine is to hold for a period of three months from date unless sooner removed by order from this office.

December 20, 1910.

(Signed) WILLIAM H. LYTLE
State Veterinarian, Oregon.

The foregoing order of course does not include the towns which regulate the matter for themselves. Enterprise council has already issued quarantine orders. This state order will help make that of the towns effective.

The following description of hydrophobia, how infection is carried, symptoms and treatment, was prepared by Dr. E. T. Baker, assistant state veterinarian of Washington, and appeared in the Clarkston Republic:

What Hydrophobia is.

DEFINITION: Hydrophobia is an extremely infectious disease of man and animals, usually transmitted by bites.

Cause: The exact cause is not known, but the virus has been demonstrated to be found in the saliva, principally, as well as in other secretions and excretions of affected animals.

ANIMALS AFFECTED: Man, dogs, horses, cats, cattle, sheep, hogs, poultry—all domesticated animals; wild animals, as coyote, skunk, badger, weasels. Rabbits are very susceptible and are used in making a post-mortem diagnosis, in this particular outbreak dogs and coyotes seem to be the principal carriers of the infection.

HOW CARRIED: From one animal to another by biting.

PERIOD OF INCUBATION: May range from a week to ten months. Usual period is about three and six weeks. For instance, if a dog is bitten by a rabid coyote, in from three to six weeks the dog goes mad, and he in turn inoculates others, if not promptly restrained and destroyed.

SYMPTOMS: Have three stages of disease:
(1) Premonitory, or when first symptoms were noted, as a desire to lick or eat cold, smooth things, as sweets; there may be an increased fondness for owner (this is particularly dangerous where children are owners of pet dogs); becoming morose retiring, sneaking; finally the dog disappears, if not tied, and may return home in a few days, when the disease assumes the:

(2) Second stage, which may be either

(a) Furious rabies—most common and most easily recognized. The dog froths at the mouth, has a tendency to bite everything; a wild look in eyes; haggard, emaciated appearance of body, drooling at mouth and hoarse, guttural bark or whine. The affectionate, well trained animal becomes a wild, maniacal, snarling, biting creature. This form is assumed when the brain is first affected.

(b) Dumb rabies—when spinal cord first affected. The lower jaw hangs paralyzed; he tries to move, but falls down on his side; throat is contracted tongue a livid hue; and the animal is a pitiful object, yet the saliva is as dangerous as in the furious form.

(c) Third stage: Paralytic or last period. The animal shows a paralysis of hind quarters, swings when trying to walk; the lower jaw relaxes completely; the paws gradually extend over the entire body, and finally death ensues in a day or two. Usually inside of ten days from the time the dog is noticed to be acting queer he is dead.

Rabid coyotes lose their natural shyness, enter towns bite man or animals, and die in an unconscious, paralyzed condition, unless killed, and usually disappear and die in a short time.

Rabid horses kick, bite, strike, lose appetite, tear stalls to pieces, dying in four or five days after first symptom noted.

Rabid cattle lose appetite, show great excitement, bellow loudly, paw the ground, look and try to bite everything. Death ensues in from four to seven days.

Rabid sheep and goats present about same symptoms as cattle.

Rabid swine show great fear, restlessness, hide in litter of straw, grunt hoarsely, glaring eyes, labored breathing.

POST MORTEM FINDINGS: None. Stomach may be full of bones, sticks, etc.

TREATMENT: Prevention—Especially quarantining dogs. If unfortunately a person is bitten by a suspicious acting animal, immediately cauterize wound with a hot iron, carbolic acid, nitric acid or caustic polish. If possible, suck the wound. If the bite is on a limb, apply a bandage of or scout cord as a tourniquet above wound. Send for a physician. Don't get excited.

PREVENTION: (1) Quarantine all dogs. Keep tied in a protected place (from coyotes) on your own premises.

(2) Isolate all animals coming in contact with rabid animals, and destroy them, if these contact animals begin to act suspiciously.

(3) Exterminate the coyotes.

OBITUARY.

Emily Mary, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Jordan, died at their home in this city at 4 o'clock Thursday morning, December 22. Funeral services were held at the M. E. church at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon. Elder M. F. Cowley of Salt Lake City delivered the funeral address.

Emily was a general favorite among her young school mates and her going has caused sadness all over the city. Her particularly sweet, gentle disposition was shown by her cheerful patience during her long illness. She was taken ill with infantile paralysis the last day of July but had recovered sufficiently to be about. Last Sunday she was taken with pneumonia from which death resulted.

Emily was born in La Grande April 18, 1902, the third of a family of five children. Seven years of her short life have been spent here.

ROBERT BALES KILLED IN NORTH COUNTRY.

Robert Bales of the Leap country was run over by a hay wagon Thursday afternoon and died from the injuries about an hour later. Mr. Bales was hauling hay and in some manner the load upset and he was thrown under the wheels. He leaves a widow and two small children. Fred Bales, his brother, and Will Baker of this city and Will and Tom Bales of Joseph, uncles of the deceased, went to Lostine Friday to attend the funeral.

Corden and Miss Edna Ragsdale left Friday morning to spend the holidays with friends at Pendleton.

New Notes From Imnaha Reporter

Road Supervisor Tom McCarty Finishing Wagon Road to Fence Creek.

Imnaha, Dec. 18.—Fine weather; cattle and sheep on the winter range are doing and looking better than usual. Imnaha is certainly the favored spot of the world.

Newt Downs, the up-river ranger, was in town last week after some supplies and coyote traps.

One of Leonard Johnson's herders killed a large cougar the other day. It measured 11 feet in length.

Imnaha cattle men are gathering up stragglers over the country and around town.

R. T. Young, son of C. E. Young, got his foot and hand badly scalded with hot tallow. He is improving fine, but still has to walk on one foot.

E. B. McGarry, employed by C. E. Young, says he has a brown bear located. He will capture him later and report.

Tom McCarty, road supervisor of this district, is completing the wagon road from Frank Kernan's to Fence Creek. He has to do lots of blasting. Tom certainly knows how to use dynamite.

Henry Haas, of lower Imnaha passed through town. He says everything is alright down his way.

Chase and Johnson are putting in a sheep and coyote proof line fence. Good fences; good neighbors.

A. P. Wilson has returned from Joseph where he delivered a few beef cattle. Art says Joseph is a wet town judging by the way people carry on.

An entirely different system of trapping is that of the Hudson Bay boys. Many years of experience has proven it successful. Dynamite means death to coyotes. Sheep men hope that coyotes will soon be a thing of the past.
