Oregon Voters Complimented.

The Walla Walla Bulletin publishes the following complimentary and sensible editorial on the election of United States senator in Oregon at the recent state election:

The state of Oregon has again come to the front as one of the great states of the Union by elaborating and demonstrating the greatest principle of our Republican form of government, that the people rule.

Direct primary laws for the election of candidates for United States senators, as well as other officials, have been enacted in many states, but none embody a statement No. 1, that the candidate receiving the majority of votes cast at the primary shall, regardless of party, be elected.

The nomination of candidates for United States senator by the people has been a great step in the reform movement. Why the election of senators by the people should be termed visionary is beyond us. The fact that in a Republican state like Oregon a Democratic senator should receive a majority of the votes cast, is no slur on the people, but a compliment to their intelligence.

By voting for Chamberlain, they evinced a desire for his election and they should have him. While we strongly believe in the tenets of the Republican party and while we prefer the election of a Republican wherever possible, we realize that the election of Chamberlain was not a blow at Republicanism, in that the rest of the Republican ticket was elected, but it evidenced the fact that the people of Oregon want Chamberlain to represent them in the United States senate, and the Oregon legislature is in duty bound to send him there. It sounds inconsistent that Republicans should elect a Democrat to office, but if the majority of the people choose a man to represent them, the highest principle of our electoral form of government by and for the people, the apparent inconsistency should therefore vanish.

The American people are becoming better acquainted as to their rights and privileges and the power of the ballot. By being able to vote directly for a United States senator they feel that they will be truly represented in the United States senate. They feel that the man they want is the best man for them, and party lines often become eliminated when they are seeking the best man.

Judge Cake is an able, conservative man, but he is not as well known to the people at large as Chamberlain, who by his two terms as governor has become well acquainted with the people. The factional fight between Cake and Fulton, the bitter arraignment of Fulton by Heney, embittered both sides, and the discontented flocked to the banner of Chamberlain.

The Oregonian's peculiar attitude in the senatorial fight also lost many votes for Cake. When the Oregonian cannot dictate policies and practices in Oregon she sits on the fence and sulks. She is recognized as the mouthpiece of the Republican party in the state, or has been, previous to this election, and when she sulks many of her readers—and she has a large following—also sulks.

These are a few of the reasons why the Republicans of Oregon voted for Chamberlain. The chief reason, however, was that they wanted him. They believed that he would truly represent them in the United States senate. The people are entitled to their choice and should ever be. We are a republic.

Initiative and Referendum Measures.

The proposed amendment increasing the pay of legislators was defeated by quite a large majority in the state. The vote of the state was pretty well indicated by the vote in Wallowa county on that measure and also the ones increasing the number of supreme judges, railroad passes for officials, woman suffrage, wide open towns and single tax, all being defeated by large majorities in the state at large as well as in Wallowa county.

Wallowa county and the state both gave large majorities in favor of the following: Working jail prisoners, the recall, requiring legislators to vote for the popular choice for U. S. senator, proportional representation, the corrupt practices bill, requiring grand jury indictment, and November elections. The division of Wasco county was decreed by the state at large, and Multnomah's big majority for the University appropriation saved that meritorious measure. The scheme to pry open the state treasury to build armories was fortunately defeated, though by a small margin. Both fish bills carried but as the fishwheel owner's bill received the larger vote it will become a law and the other will not, as that is the provision in case two acts carry that conflict, as these two do. The amendment permitting the location of state institutions elsewhere than at Salem carried by a good majority.

The Right Spirit.

Editorial in Wallowa Sun: "Let us join cheerfully with the victor and with the other towns of the valley in the up-building and expanding of the great natural resources of Wallowa county. Let the spirit of perfect harmony that prevailed the campaign continue and prosper and grow. The county seat fight is over. Let us drop it completely and after having told our friends just how it happened, let it pass forever from our remembrance."

The Wallowa Sun has changed the date of its issue from Tuesday to Friday, and increased its subscription price from $1 to $1.50 a year. The publisher says he has made a careful test and finds that a good paper cannot be published for less than $1.50 a year. This is true and there is no money in subscriptions at $1.50 under present conditions in Wallowa county. The cost of an eight-page paper, with four pages of general news, stories and miscellaneous reading matter, before a type is set for home news, exceeds 1 1/2 cents. Now add the cost of gathering and writing the home and county news, setting and correcting the type, making it ready for the press, press work, folding and mailing, and it doesn't take a Philadelphia lawyer to figure out that a very small bank will hold the editor's surplus after selling his paper even at 3 cents a copy. Everything that enters it to the cost of publishing a paper has increased from 25 to 100 per cent in the last few years. White paper has doubled in price. Wages are higher; all printing material and machinery are higher; cost of living is higher—everything is higher but the receipts and the editor's hope of ever getting enough ahead to keep off the county in his old age.

The Sun, which is entitled to the credit for the energy put into Wallowa's effort, says the county seat fight is over. It accepts the result as final and advocates peace and a get-together spirit for the up-building of its town and the county. Editor Jonas shows he is a gamblers as well as a good fighter.

Frank S. Benson, secretary of state, will become acting governor of Oregon when Chamberlain is elected to the U. S. senate next January. He will also continue to be secretary of state and will draw both salaries until the new governor to be elected in November, 1910, takes his seat.

Will Keep Pledges.

Statement No. 1 men will be in majority in the legislature, thus insuring the election of Governor Chamberlain to the U. S. senate next January. The Oregonian and other papers opposed to the popular election of senators, had the impudence to question the good faith of the legislators pledged to vote for the popular choice, and even had them interviewed as to whether they meant to keep their pledged word. This was tantamount to doubting whether they were honorable men, and is about the limit, even for political machine organs. There is no reason to believe that even one dishonorable man was elected by the voters of Oregon on June 1. There is not the slightest doubt about the members-elect from this district, Messrs. Oliver and Rusk, one Democrat and one Republican, both of whom consider it their duty to lay aside personal and party preference and vote for the popular choice. Mr. Rusk has so voluntarily expressed himself since the election, and Mr. Oliver would have as unhesitatingly voted for Mr. Cake had the latter won over Chamberlain. Why not? As Abraham Lincoln said at Gettysburg, were not the sacrifices of blood, and toil and hardship by our fathers made that a government of the people, by the people and for the people should not perish?

Thoroughbred Jerseys.

Of the herd of 10 Jersey heifers recently brought in from the Grande Ronde by L. J. Jordan, nine are full bloods, eligible to register, and not grades as stated at the time. They are beauties too and well worth a visit to Mr. Jordan's dairy farm just south of town.

Missing Editor Found.

Former Editor H. H. Palmer of the Elgin Leader, who mysteriously disappeared from La Grande several weeks ago, and who it was feared for a time had committed suicide, has at last been found. He made his identity known from Tacoma to his former partner in business at Hoquiam, Wash. The discovery of the whereabouts was brought about by urgent need of fund. Palmer wrote to Mr. Snyder, his partner in business, asking for a "bill" of $20. No effort will be made to bring the man back to Elgin, as practically all the bills against the firm were taken care of by Mr. Snyder.

5 Year Old Girl Fatally Burned

The five-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wiggins of Elgin sustained such frightful burns, Sunday, May 31, that she died soon after.

About 8 o'clock the mother had gone out to do some chores and had left the little girl alone in the house. It is presumed she commenced to play with matches. At any rate when the mother returned, it was to find her daughter enveloped in flames. Every possible help was extended to the suffering one, but she died in two hours. Her body was frightfully burned, as the cruel flames had been given time to reach every part of her anatomy. The funeral was held Monday afternoon.
