There were all kinds of trouble Tuesday for stray cows and their owners. The enforcement of the ordinance had not been very strict for a week or so, but on that day Shackelford's corral was hired for a pound, and a general round-up ensued. Range cattle were included, though the practice is that only the price of the feed is exacted on range stock the first time it is put up.

Owner of town cows, however, must pay the full poundmaster's fee. As is usual where such ordinances are enforced after long license there is a lot of kicking and the council and mayor, to say nothing of the marshal, have their troubles. Miss Bryan, of course, appears in the title role while Mr. Streeter is "Waggles, the Tramp." A large attendance is anticipated.
