CROP OF 1908 BANNER AGRICULTURAL OUTPUT

The greatest crops ever produced by any one country in the history of the world is the estimate placed on the crop of 1908 in the United States by Henry Clews, the wizard of Wall Street, and to this enormous crop is due the rapid improvement in the financial condition of the country.

Mr. Clews says: Financial conditions continue to show steady improvement, chiefly owing to favorable crop prospects easy money and a more hopeful feeling in business circles.

Our financial leaders and captains of industry are all becoming more and more optimistic in their opinions. Depression is slowly but gradually disappearing, and evidence of improvement are visible in the diminishing number of idle cars, in the somewhat better orders for steel, in a partial demand for building, and in a steadier demand for merchandise in many of the leading markets.

Of course business is still very quiet, and in volume much below that of a year ago. But the fact is true, nevertheless, that depression is waning, and that we are fairly started on the road to recovery, with no prospect of another panic in sight, because of the thoroughness of recent liquidations.

It may be some time before the activity of 1907 is regained, but the recovery should be more rapid than usual because the country generally is not suffering from over production as during the previous panic, and ere long our industries must restart to prevent an actual scarcity of merchandise if present contraction is persisted in.

The most stimulating element in the situation at present is the crop outlook. Our weather during the past two weeks continued favorable and condition of the crops has correspondingly improved.

The corn crop this year, according to present promise will yield 2,700,000,000 bushels, which at the September option price of 62 cents would be valued at $1,700,000,000. The wheat crop, with an indicated yield of 675,000,000 bushels at 93 cents per bushel would amount to $627,000,000. The cotton crop, which promise 13,000,000 bales at 9 1/2 cents would yield about $600,000,000. The oat and hay crops now out of danger, are record breakers in quantity and quality.

Last year these two crops were valued at over $1,000,000,000, and this year that sum will be further exceeded. All the crops of 1907 were estimated by the department of agriculture at a valuation of $7,412,000,000 on the farm; and in view of the larger yield this year, and the good prices generally obtained, it is quite reasonable to expect that our farmers this year will produce new wealth worth at least $8,000,000,000; the largest sum ever realized in one year by this country or any other from agricultural products.
