The coming of the railroad means the passing of the old Wallowa. The very name will change and "the Wallowa" become Wallowa county to our generous and friendly though inexact neighbors in Union.

sionists mingled with the crowd of Wallowa county people in the beautiful grove, Sunday, identity of location was lost. Unless you knew the person you knew not whence he came. This may have surprised some of the good people from L: Grande, who took literally the re mark of a La. Grande paper that the excursion was "into the wilds of the Wallowa." How a few miles of distance shrinks and shrivels some

The excursion was a splendid affair and something besides enjoyment was gained by both hosts and

To the outside world that visited this county in the days now almost past, there was only one visible sign of the isolation of "the Wallowa," and that was the primitive form of communication between the "outside" and this beautiful valley. It was indeed fitting that the first passenger train should meet in thcanyon the last stage coach fron Elgin, and the stage deserved the cheers so royally given it. For be it known, that like everything els pertaining to "the Wallowa," the stage line, by the testimony of drummers, and there are no more competent critics, was the best in Ore

And who will forget those Canyo: House dinners? There are photographs of the stage in its full glor; of six horses and all the women passengers in the best seats beside Billy Wright or Billy Arnold, and all the men passengers inside on th express and baggage. There are photos of the picturesque Canyo. road and the silvery meeting of the Minam and the Wallowa, But there are pictures also-memory picture -of those dinners in the Canyon the like of which will ne'er be found elsewhere on earth; the recollectio of which will endure while there re maineth one person living who partook of that daily banquet, and when the last one is gathered like Chie Joseph, to his fathers, the fame of the dinners will become a pleasan legend that our children's children will repeat with over increasing fic-

Pendleton has granted a franchise over its streets to the Oregon & Washington Traction company, which proposes to build an interurban line from Walla Walla to Pendleton, This is the same company that ha made survey down the Wenaha o Little Salmon in this county, and that has been reported as stating it would connect Walla Walla and Enterprise by traction,

In an interview in the Pendletor East Oregonian, E. S. Isaacs, one of the sotckholders of the O. & W., is credited with saying that the company has two power sites. One of these, and the one to be developed first, is on the Walla Walls river, while the other is on the Wenaha. It is estimated that to develop the necessary electric powe An experienced nurse offers her will require a year's time.
