"Bob," the old white horse owned by S. E. Combes, died last week and if it got its just deserts is now in horse heaven. "Bob" was about as well known as any old pioneer all the way between here and Elgin. For years he served faithfully in the livery of D. R. Allen and for many more years he has been the family driving horse of Mr. Combes, and the pet of all children, who deeply mourn the death of their favorite.

Ashley, the hawling furniture man, has received another big order of furniture, consisting of beds, springs, chairs, divans, rockers, suits and everything that is new and up-to-date. Ashley believes in buying in large quantities, saving money on both goods and freight, and he must be giving his customers the benefit or he wouldn't be compelled to buy carloads so frequently.

COVE WINS FIRST BASEBALL GAME

virtue of Kall's fumble of his grounder, third on W. Pidecock's single, the latter stealing second. Savage brought in Bauer with a neat single, stole second and scored just behind Pidecock on another long single by Hug. The latter went to second on the throw in and was sacrificed to third by R. Pidecock, but was left when Mire's grounder was nicely handled by Smith. That ended the scoring for Enterprise though Savage reached third in the eighth on his own single and Hug's short safe one, both being marooned when R. Pidecock was lining with a strike-out.

Cove got its first score in the third, when Bauer muffed E. Mire's easy fly after two were down. He made a good pickup of Carter's grounder, but his trifle high throw pulled Marvin off the base just a eye wink before Carter touched the bag. Walters followed with a single scoring E. Mires, and no more damage was done as Hug squeezed Haefer's fly. In the next inning Allen led off with a three bagger and scored on Kall's single after Smith struck out. F. Mire's bouncer to third was neatly handled by French whose throw to second to catch Kall was muffed by Hug, spilling sure double. Face got the ball and made a bad throw of it to third and Kall scored, Mire's reaching third on the play, whence he easily scored on Conley's single. E. Mires struck out and W. Pidecock smothered Carter's high fly. That was all until the ninth when that total was doubled. Following is the score:

DEATH OF SCOTT KING ACCIDENTAL

first stated in the daily papers.

Every one of Mr. King's Rainier Beach friends scout the theory of suicide. W. S. Danner, than whom no one is better able to judge the dead man, does not for a moment entertain the belief of Mr. King taking his own life. Many other well-known business men of this section have expressed themselves as being unable to unravel the mystery but they do not believe it was a case of self-destruction.

In speaking of the sad affair, Mrs. King said: "I will not believe the report, and it seems cruel to even intimate such an action to so good and honorable a man. Mr. King has always been a model husband and to his children he was the most loving and tender of fathers. He had not a thought outside of his family and home. I never knew such a home man. We have never had a difference in our married life. He kissed me and the children upon leaving us and upon returning. Does a man who lives his family so devotedly commit suicide? Would he deliberately have left wife and children to jangle with the world when his living would have made life easy for them? He has always done well by us. Look at our home—the home that he provided for us. Such men do not desert their wives and family under any stress of circumstances. My husband did not commit suicide."

When Mrs. King was asked whether her husband was in bad health, she answered: "Just about a year ago—it was in June—Mr. King took a trip to Alaska. He was a passenger on the Umattila, when for twelve days she lay jammed in the ice. The experience was a dreadful one. He was a nervous man. The strain of those days when he could get no word to us and feared he might not see us again completely unerved him. I went down to the dock to meet him upon his safe return from that voyage. I was shocked at his appearance, but I did not dare to tell him how frightened I was. From that time he frequently complained of pains in his head and he had bad headaches. Last month they recurred more often and he tried to be out-doors as much as possible, thinking the fresh air and sunshine would relieve the pain.

"Last Thursday Mr. King mowed the lawn. When he finished he came to the house and said, 'Lou, feel my hands. They feel so queer to me. I took his hands in mine and they were cold. I began to rub them with out saying a word for I thought if I spoke he might think there was something wrong with him. He had been a sort of twitching about the mouth and a thin blue line outlined his lips. From his symptoms, I feared a stroke of paralysis. My theory is that on the next day while out in the boat he was taken with a stroke and lurched overboard. Scott was a good swimmer but if such an accident occurred, it will readily be seen how impossible it would have been for him to have saved himself or tried to get aid."

Mrs. King was asked whether she knew how Mr. King came to go away to Leschi park, take a boat and go boating alone, when he was not feeling well.

"Why," said Mrs. King gently, "don't you see that is just what I am trying to show people. Mr. King had to have exercise. He needed a change. He was obliged to walk a good deal. When he started out last Friday afternoon, Donald, our boy aged three and a half years, called after his father, 'Don't forget my peanuts.' You will remember that in the pocket of one of the coats the bag of peanuts were found, showing that he had not forgotten."

"Mr. King, in my opinion, had no intention of going out in a boat. That was an accident and came from a suggestion. The boatkeeper at Leschi Park noticed Mr. King playing with some children and laughing and jesting with them. He was always fond of children. After a while he turned to Mr. King and asked him whether he would like to go out in a boat. It was a lovely day. Mr. King had taken the car up there for recreation. He thought for a moment, hesitated, and then decided to go out on the lake. It was not really his idea. He did not suggest it. Therefore, I feel that when Mr. King started out he had no idea that he would not meet again. Something happened to him. Just what, may always remain a mystery. Mr. King was a Mason. The Masons are trying to solve the affair and are rendering the greatest assistance. Everything that can be done is being done. They are leaving no stone unturned."

Of interest to Farmers and Mechanics.
Farmers and mechanics frequently meet with slight accidents and injuries which cause them much annoyance and loss of time. A cut or bruise may be cured in about one-third the time usually required by applying Chamberlain's Liniment as soon as the injury is received. This liniment is also valuable for sprains, soreness of the muscles and rheumatic pains. There is no danger of blood poisoning resulting from an injury when Chamberlain's Liniment is applied before the parts become inflamed and swollen. For sale by Burnaugh & Mayfield.
