AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

The Ethel Tucker stock company will present the popular play, "The James Boys in Missouri," at the Enterprise opera house tonight. This play had a wonderful run for many years, at one time six or seven companies were on the road playing it exclusively.

It is said the name is the most sensational part of the play, although it is full of dramatic interest with a good story woven around the home life of the famous Frank and Jesse James. The core element is strong.

DEATH RECORD.

The funeral of Gerald Holmes, who died Tuesday night, was held from the M. E. church Friday forenoon at 10 o'clock. The building was not large enough to give room to all who wished to pay respect to the universally loved lad, whose long illness and untimely death touched the very heart cords of the entire community.

The altar, pulpit and organ were fairly banked with beautiful flowers and superb wreaths nearly covered the casket. Rev. C. E. Trueblood conducted the service, preaching a sympathetic sermon. Beautiful hymns were sung by a union choir. The pall bearers were W. F. Savage, Herbert Browning, Irving French, Arthur Pace, C. F. and Will Zurcher. Behind the casket marched the boy members of Gerald's class in school, then the bereaved ones, relatives and friends in carriages, making a long cortege that slowly moved to the cemetery where the suffering-wasted form was laid to rest. Among the out-of-town people at the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Holmes and Miss McDonald of La Grande, and Mrs. E. A. Holmes and son Edward of Walla-walla.

IN MEMORIAM.

It has been well said that "Death owes a shining mark." How true is his in the death of Gerald Eaton Holmes, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Holmes, of this city. Gerald's entire life of 14 brief years, 4 months and 23 days, has been spent in this city and his death is a shadow felt by the entire community. His bereaved father, mother, sister and brother are comforted in their sorrow by the tender memories of his beautiful life. Among the most conspicuous traits of his character was his genial, generous, loving nature which made him a universal favorite among the young people and he also had the rare quality of companionship that endeared him to older people so that it is well said of him— "None knew him but to love him, nor named him but to praise."

During his late illness his fortitude under great suffering was most wonderful. He also showed at all times the most tender solicitude for the other members of the family who valued on him so lovingly and faithfully. His struggle for life was a brave one but was marked by a resignation to the will of God that revealed his beautiful soul. The air young life so full of promise has been transplanted that it may bloom in brighter fields than those of earth and though the "vacant hair" in the home speaks ever sadly to hearts that are left most desolate, yet the consolation that Gerald still lives will sanctify this grief to the home and to the many friends who mourn his death.

There is no Death! What seems so is transition.

This life of mortal breath is but a suburb of the life elysian Whose portal we call death.

He is not dead—the child of our affection—

But gone unto that school, Where he no longer needs our poor protection And Christ himself doth rule.

In that great cloister's stillness and protection,

By guardian angels led, Safe from temptation, safe from sin's pollution He lives whom we call dead."

A FRIEND.

Card of Thanks.

Knew His Name.

The man was jealous, insanely jealous, though heaven knows the girl gave him no cause.

Girls never do.

He knew the name of the man he feared.

He did not tell her so, however, but beat about the bush, as they do on the stage.

At the same time, when this story opens, they were having an emotional tussle.

"Oh, George," she said, "what is the matter?"

"You know well enough," he replied bitterly.

"I assure you I do not," she insisted.

"But you do, and you do nothing to make our life sweeter."

"Tell me what I should do," she pleaded, for, though she might be frisky with George, she did not wish to lose her grip on him entirely.

"Oh, George, George, why are you not frank with me?" she pleaded again.

George's face became ashen gray at her fateful words.

"That is it!" he hissed, the awful fire of jealousy blazing in his eyes. "That is it, Miss Smithkins. If I were Frank with you instead of George, you'd be all right."

The girl would have replied, but she could not. Her tongue clave to the roof of her mouth.

The other fellow's name was Frank. —London Answers.

A Drop In Value.

"Have you heard of Mrs. Fadleigh's latest craze?"

"No."

"She thinks it's the proper thing to lead a dog about the streets. She's got a twenty dollar silver chain and a dollar gold mounted whip."

"Hasn't she any dog?"

"Yes; she has a thirty cent dog." —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Emperor's Orderly.

Frenchmen of every rank and class dearly love titles. The manager of a Paris insurance company was decorated with the Legion of Honor a few days ago, and the clerks in the employ of the company presented him with a piece of plate to which their visiting cards were attached. On looking over them he was a good deal puzzled and amused by the visiting card of the office "boy," an old soldier from the Invalides, who was employed to open the office doors from 9 to 4. Under the man's name was the title "the emperor's orderly." He sent for the old soldier, who stumped in and saluted.

"Of what emperor are you the orderly, and how?" he asked. The old invalid drew himself up to attention.

"I am the orderly of the emperor," he said, "Napoleon, le Petit Corporal."

"But he is dead. He has been dead some time," answered the puzzled manager.

"I dust his tomb for him," growled the old soldier.—London Express.

No Morals in Dreamland.

If, as many writers have suggested, it is the soul itself that guides the imagery of dreams, how are we to explain the fact that in this chaos of ideas and feelings there is so little distinction between right and wrong that when dreaming we commit acts for which we should weep tears of blood were they as real as they seem to be.

As Professor Hoffman has said, "The familiar check of waking hours, 'I must not do it because it would be unjust or unkind,' never once seems to arrest us in the satisfaction of any whim which may blow about our wayward fancies."

From all of which we must conclude that the dream realm is a world that is entirely oblivious to any moral sense and that, though it may be true that a troubled conscience may produce or affect our dreams, the dreams themselves are never burdened with a conscience.—Bohemian Magazine.

Going Some.

Being pursued by a farmer and his three sons after being caught in the chicken yard, a young colored person had just made up his mind that he was not eluding his followers as quickly as might be when a long eared jack rabbit jumped up from the roadside and started down the road ahead of him. The would be chicken thief had run a few hundred feet farther when the farmer and his boys were astonished to hear the negro shout in a voice that quavered with fright, though unrestrained, "Say, for de Lord sake, you rabbit, get out ob de way and let some one run who can run." —Argonaut.

Tax on Hats.

Not only have hats at various times been subject to taxation, but have even been made the subject of special laws. Thus in Henry VII's reign none was allowed to sell hats at a larger price than 20 pence or caps for more than 2s. 8d. Some compensation, however, for this interference with free trade could be found in the fact that in 1571 on Sundays and holidays every one above seven years of age was required to wear a cap of wool of English make under penalty of 3 farthings fine for every day's neglect.—London Chronicle.

Town Topics.

There is a weekly average of 450 deaths in New York city among children under five years old.

Philadelphia has fifty-seven parks and squares, one of them being the largest park in the world, containing over 3,400 acres.

Two interesting organizations of Montgomery, N. Y., are the Horse Thief Detective society and the Chicken Thief Detective society. The secretary of the latter is Lyman H. Taft, a relative of President Elect Taft.
