At the regular meeting of the council Monday night, the marshal was directed to notify the owners of the soft drink houses to take out licenses or close up. L. Graves' four-room house in the northwest part of town was destroyed by fire Monday night about half past 10 o'clock. The fire caught in the kitchen or the flue and was burning fiercely when Mr. Graves, who was alone in the house, was awakened by smoke. He had time to save but very few of his clothes. It took some time for the alarm to be given and when the chemical and hose cars arrived it was too late to save the building. The house was new, having been built by Mr. Graves this summer. sufficient quantity no more Japs will be used.

Best culture here is no longer an experiment. We are ready now to rent land and the number of acres thus operated depends on the land owners. We are willing to pay a good rental, but there is a limit, of course. I have already the promise of some tracts which are desirable and I expect to be here this week to draw contracts. I do not propose to urge anybody. We are here to operate on business-like lines. We shall try and deal honestly, pay for what we get and while some people are inclined to ask much higher prices for their land than they are realizing I may say that as a general rule people are very nice and business-like and I hope our relations will be mutually pleasant and profitable, and I believe such will be the case.

MAIN INTEREST FOR NEXT TWO MONTHS

(From the Oregon Journal.)

The season is at hand for football heroes. In about six weeks a part of the population won't know whether here is one or two North Poles, and won't give a whoop who nailed the flag on them. It won't care a rap whether it be Pinchot or Ballinger that shall be the president's "big smoke," and will be a mighty lot less concerned about the Roosevelt policies than about the plunging fullback on the Rabbitville eleven. The only scarf about which it will have solicitude will be the coming great gridiron battle between Piqua Raiders and the Jonesburg Horse Marines. The only current news to be honored with its attention will be the thrilling story of how the great audience stood on its feet while the lightning halfback of the scarlet and green, bleeding from 40 wounds and crippled in both legs, snatched the coveted pigskin from the gigantic guard of the cream and yellow, and smashing through the dismayed line, raced down the field and planted the ball over the line, squarely in front of the goal, all amid the yells of the shouting thousands from Sloumville. And as the whistle sounds for time, and fighting Bill, the half-back, is borne in triumph from the field, who in all that thrilled throng will care a straw whether it was Cook or Cook's grandmother that discovered the Pole, or whether big William Taft is president or a constable?"

Union recently had a fruit, flower and vegetable exhibit and the Scout, whose veracity is unquestioned, announces that in the exhibit were "string beans as big as bananas, potatoes as big as pumpkins, and pumpkins as big as—"but it refused to go farther. It is stated that a squash from the Foster truck farm weighed 73 pounds and a pumpkin from Gen. Goolbrod's weighed an even hundred. As these weights are nearly up to the standard of Wallowa county vegetables we see no reason to question them.

COOK GENTLEMAN, PEARY CAD

Latter Should Go to North Pole and Stay There.

The San Francisco Chronicle's remarks about the Cook-Peary controversy are very generally echoed in the minds of the people:

"There is no generosity in Peary's endeavor, and no courtesy to his opponent. He is not in the game for sport, but for money, and the verdict of the country is that Dr. Cook is a gentleman and Peary a cad, and that without reference to whether either of them reached the North Pole.

"That Cook reached the spot which he has claimed which he carried indicated as the North Pole, the country believes. As to what Peary did, here has ceased to be much curiosity. Nobody cares whether he got to the North Pole, but there would be much satisfaction if it were known that he would now go there and stay here. It is a good place for him."

The Scope of Osteopathy.

The question is sometimes asked, "What does osteopathy treat?" In reply it may be said that osteopathy is co-extensive with the science and art of healing. Theoretically it embraces conservative surgery, and surgeons in our own colleges are now being educated. Practically at the present time the majority of osteopaths, though trained in surgical diagnosis, do not undertake the treatment of cases requiring major surgical operations. It is true, however, that many cases generally regarded as surgical yield to osteopathic treatment.

Osteopathy is based upon the theory that where there is a free flow of the vital fluids and unobstructed nerve impulses throughout the body condition of health will obtain. If there are any diseases or disorders of the human body not dependent or cure upon a normal blood and lymph flow and the free, unobstructed transmission of nerve impulses, then osteopathy is not applicable in such cases.—Heald of Osteopathy.

Local packers at Cove estimate that more than 50 cars of Italian prunes will be shipped from Cove this season. Six packing houses are turning to full capacity and help is scarce. Heretofore the most of the same crop has gone to the dryer, but this year it is thought every usable prune will be shipped fresh.

GREAT WHEAT AREA IN CENTRAL OREGON

As now exists, there is no danger of lessened prices through the exploitation of wheat fields in Central Oregon.

One ton of Douglas fir seeds, capable of making 80,000,000 big fir trees, will be planted within the coming fortnight by the national forest service in this state. Fully one-

Third of this will be planted in the Bull Run national forest. Reforestation in the Bull Run reserve is undertaken with a view to increasing the flow of the Bull Run river, the source of Portland's water supply. Reforestation of the slopes along the river is expected to conserve the moisture and practically double the flow. The present water supply of the stream is sufficient for Portland, it is estimated, for the next 50 years, but with double the volume of water now secured from Bull Run, it is thought the stream will supply Portland for the next 300 years. The forest service will experiment in other forest reserves of the state in reforesting barren slopes. Officials have been handicapped in the work because of lack of seed. There are but two people in the West who are gathering Douglas fir seed for sale. The crop gathered by these two is purchased by the forest service, yet it is inadequate by far. From $1.50 to $2.50 per pound is paid for the seed and instructions to homesteaders and others who gather it will readily be furnished by the forest service.

The old John Devine ranch, located in Harney county, and comprising 15,000 acres, has been sold by J. G. Elrod, a local real estate dealer, to capitalists of North Yakima for $300,000. The ranch is one of the best known in the state and the sale just made carries with it a profit of about $100,000 for the seller, who bought it 18 months ago at a much less price. The coming of railroads to Central Oregon has resulted in increased values for the great body of land lying east of the Cascade Mountains.
