An Easy Grade.
Patronage, political, religious and social, has seen its best days in England, and it is becoming more and more difficult. St. James' Budget opines, to find material for such a story as follows:
At the end of a political campaign many years ago a young man who had worked valiantly for the successful candidate claimed a reward. The prize promised was a sergent's in the artillery. But the candidate found that he was unable to carry out his promise, inasmuch as it required six years service to qualify a man for the rank. He became thoughtful, but finally saw light.

"Does it require six years to qualify a man for a lieutenant?" he asked one who knew.
"Certainly not," was the reply.
"Well, make young Blank a lieutenant, then," said the candidate, with a sigh of relief.
Blank was thus made a lieutenant for no other reason than that he was not fit to be a sergent.

Their Annual Relaxation.
The man who was supposed to be the model upon which Dickens based his creation of Mr. Pecksniff and the man's wife were a couple of preternatural solemnity.
So open were they to the charge of taking themselves too seriously that Edmund Yates once asked Charles Dickens whether he thought they were ever conscious of playing a part.
"I think," replied Dickens, "once a year they exchange a wink, possibly on Carter's birthday."—Youth's Companion.

A Quick Dodge.
Walking along Wall street the other day, he was accosted by a shabbily dressed man evidently armed with a hard luck story.
"I beg pardon, sir," began the stranger, "but could you help a poor man along? Now, I'm not looking for money, sir, but—"
"Well," came the almost breathless answer, "if you're not, I am. Good day."

And in a moment the young man was halfway down the street.—New York Post.

HOLMAN TELLS OF WALLOWA COUNTY

Grande Ronde river to the mouth of the Wallowa river; thence in a south westerly direction up the center of the Wallowa river to the mouth of the Manum river; thence in a southerly and easterly direction up the center of said Manum river to its source on the summit of the Powder River mountains; thence following said summit or divide in an easterly direction to a point about 20 miles due west of Snake river; thence due east to what is known as Limestone point on the east line of the state of Oregon; thence north following said east line of the state of Oregon to the place of beginning." (General law of 1887, page 142.)

Mr. Holman's article, in the main correct, gives the northwest boundary wrong. The northern boundary does not stop at the Grande Ronde river but continues westerly to the summit of the Blue mountains and to the headwaters of Elbow creek, thence down the creek in a southeasterly direction to the Grande Ronde, and he rest as above described.

Tobacco Smoke.

The body is a factory of poisons, says a big pathologist. These poisons are constantly being poured out at the rate of eight pounds a day. One-third of these poisonous excreta passes through the lungs in the form of steam or vapor. The lungs within their comparatively small compass contain a folded surface of about 1,000 square feet, in area equal to the floor of a room forty feet square. It is through this surface that the oxygen is drawn into the body and the poisonous carbon dioxide thrown off. Smoke in reality is nothing more or less than a cloud of fine carbon dust—soot. And when this dust comes into contact with the surface of the lungs it forms a thin coating which obstructs the entrance of oxygen laden air as well as the exit of the poisonous outbreathings. The smoker or he who inhales smoke either directly or by sitting in a smoke laden atmosphere is both starved and poisoned—starved for oxygen, the most important of all the foods, and poisoned by his own excreted waste.—Chicago Tribune.
