An American who was educated at the University of Göttingen was discussing German universities and said: "A great many young American students finish up in Germany. They have quite a reputation there. A great German biologist once said to me: 'I think we shall have to exclude your young compatriots from our schools. They no sooner come here than they begin to cheat.' 'Cheating?' said I, alarmed. 'How so?' 'Why,' said the biologist, 'they only pay tuition for one, but they learn enough for three or four.'"

Treasure Trove.
Treasure trove is the name given to coin, gold or silver plate or bullion found hidden in the earth or other private place, the owner being unknown. According to the Roman law, such treasure, if found by a man on his own land, belonged to the finder, but if found on the land of another was divided between the finder and the landowner. In England treasure trove belongs to the crown, and concealment by the finder is an indictable offense, punishable by fine and imprisonment. If, however, the treasure is not actually covered by earth it belongs to the finder. In the United States treasure trove usually belongs to the person finding it.—New York American.
