PARADISE GLINTS.

Paradise, April 29—Land still wet here. Farmers have just got started to plowing for spring crops.

Mr. Pharris of Anatone, Wash., and Mr. Overstreet were here last week selling twine and Champion binders.

We are informed that Mr. Ford of Anatone, Wash., has purchased the remainder of Peter Fordney's stock of goods and will put in a stock of goods here.

George Frazier Jr., of Flora, passed through here enroute to Anatone day before yesterday.

James Barnes and John Bolln took a load of fat hogs to Enterprise this week.

William Cline, whose horses were stolen some time ago, has got them back.

Mrs. A. J. Stowell is confined to her bed with inflammatory rheumatism.

Mrs. W. B. Applegate is bedfast with a lame back.

Erna Fisher brought a load of freight from Lewiston for W. J. Straley last week.

Bailey Shelton and family were in Paradise this week.

MERRY PARTIES PICNIC AT HURRICANE CREEK

Dr. Mrs. Moore, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Ketchum, and Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, of Kansas City, who were visiting with Dr. and Mrs. Moore, spent Tuesday on Hurricane Creek fishing. The merry party went for the outing and for the invigorating pleasure of seeing the country, fully as much as for the "tremendous" trout that were patiently waiting these to be taken.

The high school picnic held Saturday on Hurricane Creek was enjoyed by all in attendance, despite the cold of the day. The day was employed in games and various amusements under the direction of the teachers, and though some of the participants were a little "chilly" during the ride home every one seemed to have had a splendid time.

MEETING OF THE LOCAL COMMERCIAL CLUB

A meeting is called for the Enterprise Commercial Club to be held next Monday night. The place of meeting will be announced later. Every member of the club should be present. The spirit of rapid growth and development is "upon the face of the land," and Enterprise and Wallowa county are in the van of it. Come. Appoint yourself a committee of one to see that you are in attendance.

He Pronoted.

A Scotchman was presenting a letter of introduction to a merchant in the Ecuadorian capital, Quito. Ecuador is noted for its earthquakes. The houses are but one story in height, and the windows and doors of the thick walls are the universal niches for safety.

Of course at that moment an earthquake had to come along.

Like a flash the merchant shot into one of the window niches, yelling to the stranger: "Pronot! Pronot!" which means "Quick! Quick!"

In narrating the incident afterward the Scotchman said, "I didn't know Spanish, and I didn't know what 'pronot' meant, but you may bet I pronoted all the same."

Tree That Turns to Stone.

There is a tree that grows in Mexico called the chijol, or stone tree. It is of enormous proportions, both in circumference and height. It has a number of branches spreading out widely and carrying leaves of a yellowish green color. The wood is extremely fine and easily worked in a green state. It is not given to either warping or splitting. The most remarkable thing about it is that after being cut the wood gets gradually harder and in the course of a few years it is absolutely petrified, whether left in the open air or buried in the ground. From this timber houses can be built that would in a few years become completely fire-proof and would last as long as though built of stone.

Bill Nye and the Phenologist.

A phenologist once told Bill Nye that he would shine as a revivalist and said that he ought to marry a tall blond with a nervous, sanguinary temperament.

"All right, gentle scientist," said Bill Nye, "I will marry the tall blond with the bank account and bilious temperament when you give me a chart showing me how to dispose of a brown eyed brunette with thoughtful cast of countenance who married me in an unguarded moment two years ago."

THOUSANDS OF ACRES ARE WAITING FOR YOU

Husbands of Industry Will Find Rich Reward Here.

THE KIND OF PEOPLE NEW WALLOWA HAS

Every Industrious Settler Will Find Himself One of a Big, Busy Family.

Fuel Here Also.

We have fuel here also—coal and wood. Stretches of fine timber in the rough country for miles; millions upon millions of feet of merchantable timber, with section upon section of fuel timber solve the fuel problem for unthinkable generations.

With plenty of fuel and plenty of power Enterprise will respond to a very extensive development along the lines of manufacturing. Moreover the markets are here. The people of Wallowa county now are compelled to ship in the things they can and should and will be manufacturing here. Raw material lies in the hills, covers the mountains, and is potentially in the soil. Wool for woolen mills is grown here, and Wallowa is in need of the mills. Hides for tanneries and for shoe manufactories are grown here, and Enterprise and the people of Wallowa need the tanneries and manufactories. Scores of other manufacturing plants of varying nature would find in Enterprise just the location their stockholders are looking for, and we would welcome all growth and incoming interests.

The People Here.

Of the class of people throughout Wallowa county too much can not be said in praise. Of their industry, wide-awake qualities, generosity, sympathy, and all that makes up the best of humanity anywhere, too much can not be claimed for the people of Wallowa. In Enterprise we have this class of people. They extend what is called the "glad hand" to every hard-working, honorable prospective resident. The settler coming here will find this characteristic a marked one on the part of those with whom he comes in contact.

For a long time the people of Wallowa county lived in the interior, off any railroad. Every pound of freight was hauled in from the outside by wagon freighters. It required two days' journey by stage to reach the county seat from the outside world. Settlers, for many years, battled with Indians, and were in daily jeopardy of their lives. All homesteaders early learned the lesson of flying to each other's need. Sympathies were quickened by the very geographical inconveniences and by the early pioneer hardships. So, fortunately, lost the frivolous conventionalities in the more important realities of the day. Forced to get right down to the earth and to found the business empire of Wallowa county upon what are called "hard licks," the people developed the sturdiness of character which is capable of standing alone and working out a destiny anywhere under the great bending sky.

Into the midst of just such people the man and woman of the east will come, if he or she comes to Enterprise or to any point in Wallowa county. And it is like getting into a big family, where everybody seems to be deeply concerned with the welfare of everybody else, to locate in Wallowa. To crown all this, the people of Wallowa, under early hardships, kept pace with the world, built their schoolhouses and churches, established their libraries, subscribed to their daily and weekly newspapers, and marched along in the van of events. Such people have culture as well as sturdy initiative and adaptability; they have deep sensibilities as well as the brawn required to lift up public enterprises into concrete realization; and they have reflection as well as eager "push and go."

With due consideration for the people of every other locality in Oregon and the northwest, the stranger in Enterprise and Wallowa county will be impressed that no grander lives ever were devoted to empire building than those that have congregated within the limits of this county. Jim Hill of the Great Northern would delight his heart among the people of Wallowa. He is noted as an empire builder, a developer of towns and cities and lands, a benefactor who aims to make two blades of grass grow where but one grew before. But he would find in Wallowa county people who came in here before he became an empire builder, to do precisely what he has striven to do. These grizzled old heads of Wallowa entered this country when savagery and primitiveness left trails of blood through the fertile valleys, across the mountains, over trails, and through the woods. And they stayed. Today they and their descendants and other incoming settlers have carried the work of empire building forward, until Wallowa county is rich in all fruit production including apples, pears, peaches, cherries, raspberries, blackberries; vegetables of all kinds; wheat, rye, barley and oats; sheep, cattle and horses; and to cap the climax of these products, Wallowa is entering upon the era of its city building activity.

Come to Wallowa.

No one having industry, patience, determination and a desire to live in comfort and plenty, should fail to locate amid such richness and in the midst of such people. The farmer of Wallowa county grows rich while he sleeps. His lands advance by leaps and bounds while he is reaping his harvest of fruit or grains. When the world is clamoring for bread and offering a dollar a bushel for wheat, the Wallowa county farmer is smiling at his thousands of acres of wheat which will yield him from 30 to 40 bushels per acre. While the market for vegetables and fruits is rapidly increasing, the vegetable and fruit grower of Wallowa county is merely pruning his trees and shrubbery, and preparing for the crop that is a sure winner and sure bank account for him and his family. In Wallowa county, in many places, the farmer can irrigate or not, just as he needs it, or does not need it. In many other places irrigation is not yet practiced, because the localities are new; still wheat is grown without irrigation, and it is the best wheat raised in Oregon.

The coming settler must, of course, know that Wallowa county is a new section than any county in New York, Ohio, or any of the eastern or middle states. Necessarily there is hard work in store for any settler. But it is no harder than lies in store for a successful man anywhere else, and not half as hard as that which the settler leaves to come here. Moreover, there is certainty of increased value of lands, certainty of all crops, certainty of market, and certainty of good prices for whatever the settler wishes to raise. If you are a grain farmer, come to Wallowa—we have some of the best small grain land and climate on earth here. If you are a truck gardener, come to Wallowa county—we have some of the best vegetable land and climate in the world. If you are a fruit raiser, come to Wallowa—we have locations, still crying for settlement, where the finest peaches, pears, apples, plums, prunes and the like can be raised, of any in the Northwest. The name of Wallowa spells success and prosperity for every man and woman who will come here with a little money and go right to work.

MAL-ADJUSTMENTS VERY COMMON

The Osteopath is the master machinist whose specialty is this human machine. He knows exactly what its adjustments should be throughout; and when good health is not resulting from its labors, he at once seeks to learn in what respect its adjustments differ from those of the normal body in which there is no blemish of disease.

The case of the human machine differs from that of the machine of metal only for the reason that when there is faulty operation defects in its adjustments are much more certain to exist. It is a proven fact that there is scarcely a species of disease, or a single case of any such species, in which either the aggravating or the pre-disposing cause is not a discoverable mis-adjustment of some parts of the structure. This may be a displacement of the bony parts from their normal relative positions, a contracture of soft tissue part such as the stomach or intestines, or other abnormality in the structure.

In any case it causes interference with the proper circulation of the fluids and nerve force of the body, and the only hope of radical cure lies in its correction.

In the thirty-three years of its development period Osteopathy has thoroughly proven every one of these facts; and Osteopaths everywhere are proving them anew constantly by removing the structural causes of disease and bringing health even in the most difficult and abandoned cases.—Right, Way.
