Consul King David.
This amusing anecdote of Lamartine is related by the Baroness Bonde in her volume of letters. Shortly after the revolution of February he wrote on the blank leaves of his pocketbook the names of his proteges and sent the list to be provided with places immediately. Previously, however, it seems, he had scribbled "David" on the page, and the head of the cabinet appointed the said David consul at Bremen. The postulant, however, never came forward, and, though the post did not like being disturbed, M. Hétel was obliged to ask who was the David on his list.

"He who danced before the ark," was the answer.
"Oh, dear! I have gazetted him to Bremen!"
"How very singular! I meant him for a subject for meditation, not for nomination. But you can cancel it." The minister registered the change, but few knew that the last consul appointed to Bremen was King David!

Language of Switzerland.
It is a curious fact that the people most celebrated for love of country should in a manner be without a language—that is, a mother tongue. The Swiss have three official languages—German, French and Italian. About three-fourths of the population of the mountain confederation speak German, while the remainder divide four other languages among them, chiefly French and Italian, these languages being found, as a rule, in districts in close proximity to the countries where those languages are the principal tongue. In Switzerland documents and notices are printed in both the French and German languages. In the national assembly members deliver their speeches in either French or German, for nearly all members understand both tongues. The decrees and proclamations of the president are translated by an official interpreter and furnished to the press in both languages.—New York Press.

Her Fault.
The teacher in charge of the primary department at a school in West Philadelphia was talking the other day about her work and her pupils.
"They are dear youngsters," she said, "but they sometimes make curious remarks. Several times I have had occasion to reprove a little boy who isn't bad, but who is very mischievous and annoying. He is always getting into trouble and making a disturbance."
"One day he had been more than usually uproarious, and I was very tired. Instead of scolding or punishing him I began in rather an exasperated tone to talk to him."
"Tom," I said, "I'm afraid I'm never going to meet you in heaven."
"He looked up with the most shocked face. 'Why, teacher,' he said, 'isn't that just too bad? What have you done?'"—Philadelphia Times.

A Modest Request.

An impeccably dressed gentleman the other day when walking along Piccadilly felt a movement in his pocket and, clapping his hand thereto, seized the wrist of the thief. He drew forth the erring member, and looking at it with supreme disgust, he released it, saying, with a grimace of disgust, "For heaven's sake, my good man, go and wash your hands before you put them in a gentleman's pocket again!"—London Tatler.

THE OSTEOPATHIC PRIMER.

A Seventh Cause of Disease—Displacements or Displaced Organs.

To no other disease condition does the osteopath assign greater importance than to the mal-position of abdominal and pelvic organs.
Displacements of the abdominal organs, as the stomach, liver, spleen and kidney; of the pelvic organs—ovaries, uterus, rectum, are a most fruitful source of ill health.
Under disease of the pelvic organs, falls the consideration of nearly all the "Diseases of Women," the treatment of which has always offered greater opportunities for meddling surgery and temporarily palliative medical treatment than all other diseases combined, simply because of failure to recognize the primary cause of these conditions.

When is a floating kidney, a displaced uterus, or hypersensitive ovaries etc., ever a primary condition, that is to say, purely a local affection? Rarely, if ever. Given any of these chronic conditions, and we will find that all the abdominal and pelvic organs are more or less flabby and weakened. And back of that general "atony" of structures there is more than likely some hidden osteopathic lesions depriving the diseased organs of due nerve and blood nutrition.

The patient complains of nervousness, backache, fatigue on slight exertion, disordered menstruation and similar symptoms. The ordinary diagnosis: Displaced uterus or laceration of cervix or prolapsus. Ordinary treatment: Strictly "local", antiseptic douches, pessary, dilation, curettement, operation.
Result: Persistence of symptoms, after all treatment, even after total extirpation of organs. Why? Because if the first diagnosis had been carefully made, or if carefully made care-fully considered, it would have resulted in the knowledge that not only the uterus but the abdominal and pelvic organs were at fault, all tissues weakened and every physiological process perverted.

The treatment is, to place those organs back where they belong. The content must have her vital energies regenerated, must have the nerve force and blood supply of these parts properly regulated, and until this is done medical and surgical treatment will ever be temporary, unsatisfactory measures.

Osteopathy accomplishes four things in these cases and common sense will teach that they are necessary before health can be expected.

1st. It replaces, by mechanical manipulation, the displaced viscera.

2nd. It accelerates the blood flow, passing through the organs at fault.

3rd. It increases the strength of the nerve force, restores tone to flabby tissues and increases the vital energies so essential to health.

4th. It corrects anatomical variation of the skeletal structure; this last is necessary because in the majority of pelvic and abdominal displacements we find the trouble to be with the lower portion of the spinal column, or the pelvis—usually the dorsal and lumbar vertebrae are "too straight."

Has it ever occurred to you that in the spinal cord originate nerves that control these organs, and that interference with the proper distribution of nerve force by pressure always causes mischief?

In osteopathy we have the remedial agent best calculated to cure that vast number of diseases usually classified as "Diseases of Women", and without subjecting the patient to the annoyances of medical treatment or the dangers of surgical interference.—Osteopathic Health.

To Whom It May Concern:

I wish to say that I have just called on Drs. Gray at The Enterprise Hotel and took the vitalized air and had seven very bad teeth extracted in less than one minute. I can truthfully say that I felt no pain at all and no bad effects afterward. I can gladly recommend the Doctors as doing exactly as they claim, and would advise every one suffering with bad teeth to call.
