

THERE'S a certain touch of smartness to Brandegee Kincaid & Co. Clothes," that clever dressers cannot overlook.

It doesn't make any difference where you happen to be, if you are clothed in these excellent garments you are beyond criticism.

In the village, in the city, in the metropolis or the country, their correctness cannot be questioned.

We can easily see how you might consider our conversation very lightly, but if you will inspect our clothes you'll appreciate the heaviness of every argument.

These clothes are not only smart as to their general lines; they are also made from fabrics which are very handsome and certainly very unusual.

TWO CARS CANNON SHIPPED TO COAST.

(From La Grande Star.)

The expedite freight which passed through La Grande for the west Saturday had two cars loaded with cannon for Fort Stevens, near the mouth of the Columbia. There was in the consignment fourteen pieces of artillery which are known as the rapid fire gun, which throw shots of four pounds at the rate of sixty shots per minute. The cannon were shipped from Fort Sherman near Chicago.

This class of artillery is for field use only and is not designed for coast defense, but it appears that there is a necessity for protecting the coast to the fullest extent possible.

The shipment of this armament passed through La Grande without causing any particular excitement but at the same time it reveals the fact that the government is not idle in the matter of preparing against emergencies, in case the present war-like conditions become more serious.

OUT OF THE GINGER JAR.

Just how far does the kitchen range?

The housewife is known by the bread she bakes. "I've seen brighter days," sighed the saucepan in the slovenly kitchen.

"Well, I'll be switched," angrily exclaimed the small boy; and he was. The hotbed is well enough in its place, but few people would care to sleep in it.

TEACHING FARMERS BY MAIL.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis—The principles of making the college of direct, practical service to every tax-payer of the state of Oregon, of carrying its assistance and instruction out to those who are unable to attend the courses at Corvallis, is demonstrated in a striking manner by the Oregon Agricultural college in its new correspondence course in farm accounting and business methods, given by the school of commerce under Dean J. A. Bexell. One advantage to the farmers, in addition to the fact that it is free to all, is that it can be taken up at any time and carried on at the convenience of the student, without restriction as to the number of months it covers. There are already fifty students enrolled in the work, and it has so attracted the attention of the publishers of the bulletin of lesson instructions that they have evolved a plan by which Dean Bexell's course can be offered by all the different agricultural schools throughout the country, adapted to each locality and its particular needs. As fast as the funds and instructional force at the college will allow, other courses will be added to the correspondence work for farmers, including a study of rural law, and agricultural economics. Unfortunately the legislature did not allow the appropriation requested for this work, so it cannot at this time receive the attention and development planned for it. It is the policy of the college, however, to extend these advantages to the people of the rural communities of the state as fast as resources will permit.

REVISED FOREST RULES APPROVED

livestock men and to his department.

Regulated grazing on the National Forests seeks not only to make available, to the fullest degree consistent with proper protection of the range itself and of forest growth and stream-flow conditions, the annual forage crop, but also to allot the grazing privilege equitably. By giving the stockmen themselves a chance to be heard with regard to the rules established, and by securing their help in the adjustment of disputes between claimants for use of the range, the department officials consider that the task of administering the range satisfactorily has been made much easier.

While no radical change in the regulations have been made, Secretary Wilson has carefully considered all modifications proposed with a view to improving the system of grazing administration. As a result of his conferences with the representatives of the stockmen's associations, a number of changes were made in the details concerning the conditions under which owners may surrender, transfer, or renew application for grazing privileges. Both the department and the stockmen are anxious to prevent speculation in grazing privileges, and suggestions for minor modifications of the rules, offered by the stockmen to this end, were readily accepted.

It is the expressed belief of Secretary Wilson that the new regulations mark a step forward in the administration of the National Forests by the Government, with the hearty co-operation of the stockmen, under effective methods which have in view both the largest possible measure of service to the public from the forests and the fullest promotion of the welfare of the stock industry itself, consistent with this service.
