WINGED COURSE OF JUSTICE.

Judge Wolverton of the Federal District court has just rendered a decision in favor of the government in the land forfeiture suit against the Oregon & California railroad.

The suit was started only two or three years ago, and great surprise is felt by everybody that a decision was handed down so soon.

After a few months—from three to thirty—given to the corporation attorneys to spar for wind, the second round will start in the Federal Court of Appeals. With the celerity of court number one as an example, the more sanguine attorneys for the government will not be surprised if decision number two is handed down soon after the close of the San Francisco fair.

Then will come another short respite of a year or two for the hard-working, underpaid attorneys, and off they merrily will go to the U. S. Supreme court. But then a change will come over the scene. The unseemingly haste of the inferior courts will be justly rebuked by the dread silence of the most august tribunal on earth. Years will pass. Administrations will change. Hills will be leveled and valleys become canyons. Just as future historians will be about to close the case with the celebrated one of Jarndyce vs Jarndyce, and the long lost Charlie Ross, the impressive silence will be broken and a decision handed down. It won't touch on the merits of the case but will deal with a demurrer on some technicality. The demurrer may be sustained. Great victory!

And the case probably will be begun all over again in the Federal district court of Portland, Oregon.

INNOCENT TILL PROVEN GUILTY.

People who are making up their opinion of the guilt or innocence of the McNamara on the evidence "discovered" by detectives, should remember the Steve Adams case in Colorado a couple of years ago.

Adams, a union laborer, was accused of murdering a non-union workman. Detectives produced the corpse of the "murdered man," and much corroborative evidence. But the unions paid for a great legal fight and finally one of the detectives broke down and confessed the whole thing as a plant, including the corpse, put thru for the rewards promised by employers' associations.

Just remember the immense sums offered for the arrest of certain men in this Los Angeles affair, and remember, too, that not a cent of reward has been offered to solve the mystery of the explosion.

Some 23 or 24 years ago a millionaire in Chicago named Snell was found dead in the lower hall of his home, presumably murdered by a robber. Suspicion was directed against one Willie Tascott, and $20,000 was offered for his capture. He was never captured, and no one could ever induce the Snell family to offer one cent reward for the capture of the murderer of the elder Snell, or to clear up the mystery surrounding his death.

Great wealth can put thru most any kind of rascality without being found out.

"LAMBS" SHYING AT WATER.

The three or four men who control three-fourths of the railroad mileage of this country take turns in lecturing the people and telling how attempted regulation of public transportation is scaring investors so that no money is available for new construction, betterments, etc.

None of the railroad kings ever spend a cent of their OWN money in new construction, or a cent of the vast millions they have filched from the investing public by stock jobbing schemes.

"Lambs" furnish the money for new construction, and maybe the "lambs" are getting just a trifle shy of buying railroad stocks that are three-fourths water.

HILL'S BRIGHT SCHEME.

James J. Hill, empire builder and finance king who made millions from an investment of shrewdness combined with unscrupulousness, is advocating public control of railroads and publicity of corporation business—with an if. The if is the creation of a board of experienced railroad men to do the public controlling.

That reminds one of the city boss who didn't care who did the electing as long as he controlled the nominations.

Little interest is being taken in the city election to be held next Tuesday. There is no issue before the voters, and the men nominated for the several offices are all worthy citizens, so no matter who is elected, clean, honorable men will have charge of civic affairs.

A good rain fell on this section Wednesday night and Thursday that will start the grass and spring grain growing and spread a green mantle over the valley and uplands. Fall grain is everywhere looking fine. Sheep owners are rejoicing over a good lambing season with a large percent of increase. If wool prices stiffen up a bit this county will have a very prosperous outlook for the season of 1911.

Constipation brings many ailments in its train and is the primary cause of much sickness. Keep your bowels regular, madam, and you will escape many of the ailments to which women are subject. Constipation is a very simple thing, but like many simple things, it may lead to serious consequences. Nature often needs a little assistance and when Chamberlain's Tablets are given at the first indication, much distress and suffering may be avoided. Sold by all dealers.

mander of the royal guard ruled supreme. General Braze tore off his own epaulets and presented himself to Quinnox as a soldier of the file. Prince Robin, quite recovered from his fright, donned the uniform of a colonel of the royal dragoons, buckled on his jeweled sword and, with boyish zeal, demanded at a council of war Colonel Quinnox's reasons for not going forth to slay the rioters.

"Your highness," said the colonel bitterly, "the real army is outside the walls, not inside. We are a pitiful handful, less than 300 men all told, counting the wounded. Count Marlanx heads an army of several thousand."

"He wants to get in here so's he can kill me. Is that so, Colonel Quinnox?" The prince was very pale, but quite calm.

"Oh, I wouldn't put it just that way, your highness."

"Oh, I know! You can't fool me! I've always known that he wants to kill me. But how can he? Nobody can. He ought to know that. He must be awful stupid."

"We must get word to Tullis!" cried several in a breath. A dozen men volunteered to risk their lives in the attempt to find the American in the hills. Two men were chosen—by lot. They were to venture forth that very night.

"My lords," said the prince as the council was on the point of dissolving. "Is it all right for me to ask a question now?"

"Certainly, Rob-in," said the prince minister.

"Well, I'd like to know where Mr. King is."

"He's safe, your highness," said Quinnox.

"Well, you run in and tell Aunt Lorraine this minute that Mr. King sends his love to her and begs her to rest easy. See if it doesn't cheer her up a bit."

At night two attempts were made by Haddan and another subaltern to leave the castle to reach Tullis, but both sorties proved failures. A day later Marlanx sent two men under a flag of truce to offer his infamous ultimatum. His offer of a safe conduct of the prince to America was refused, for the inmates of the castle knew full well the count would doom the lad to instant death if he should get him in his possession.

A single distant volley at sunset had puzzled the men on guard at the castle. They had no means of knowing that the committee of ten and its wretched friends had been shot down like dogs in the public square. Peter Brutus was in charge of the squad of executioners.
