KILLED BY LOG TRAIN

Jess Russell, Engineer on '10-Spot' Fell Under Runaway Train and Was Instantly Killed

Jess Russell, engineer on the "10-Spot" for the Spaulding logging company was instantly killed Thursday afternoon at about 5 o'clock on the railroad four miles west of Black Rock.

Mr. Russell with the rest of the crew, started from the roll way with five cars loaded with logs. When they reached the regular stopping place, which was on a steep grade, the engineer put on the brakes, but the wheels of the engine and cars slid on the rails. The train was running at the rate of forty miles an hour, and first one car and then another began to derail. The fireman, Wm. Lents jumped from the engine on the left side of the track and landed safely. The train had run a distance of 100 yards when Russell leaped from the engine on the right side of the track. On the right side of the track is a high bank and when Mr. Russell jumped he landed on the bank and was overbalanced and fell backward, his head was severed from the body by the wheels of the cars. The engine went down the track for some distance and stopped, and was found to be under a full compression of steam.

When the fireman, Wm. Lents came up he found Russell lying by the side of the rails and his head in the middle of the track. He ran to where the brakeman, I. H. Vinson was and they reported the accident to the superintendent.

The body was taken up and brought to this city on a flatcar. The coroner R. L. Champman of Dallas was notified and came immediately and held an inquest over the body at the depot. A verdict was not arrived at that night and the body was taken to Dallas in an ambulance.

The deceased had been an engineer for many years and had worked in different camps until coming to Black Rock about fifteen years ago. He was an efficient engineman and had had several runaways at this identical place, but had always stayed with the engine. In one of the runaways the engine turned over with him, but he escaped injury. Years ago his brother was killed over on the Big Luckiamute by a falling tree.

Mr. Russell was unmarried and leaves a father and mother and several brothers to mourn his loss.

Met With Serious Accident

Tuesday afternoon shortly before the whistle blew for quitting time Cecil Ouder Kirk got his left hand and arm crushed in the bevel gears that runs the rolls that carries the lumber to the resaw. He and another boy were scuffling and Ouder Kirk in an effort to brace himself grasped at the housing about the gear, but got his hand too far under and the cogs caught his fingers drawing his hand and arm into its cruel jaws. The machinery was stopped as soon as possible but it could not be backed up and it was necessary to take the machinery apart before he could be released. He was taken to the hospital at Dallas immediately where his arm was amputated just below the elbow. He is getting along very nicely at this time.

Cecil is the eldest son of Saul Ouder Kirk and is about 19 years old.

[It is denied that he was wrestling at the time of the accident. The above is as told to us.—Ed.]

Dr. Lowe says that price does not mean value. The price of glasses gives title to them only. Glasses, without knowledge and service back of them, are worth only the cost of raw material. Your eyes are worth more money than most of us possess. Why take chances? Service comes first with him. His more than 23 years experience makes him a safe man for you to consult. He will be in Falls City Wednesday June 2. Consult him.

Mrs. Chapin and daughter Mildred were Dallas visitors Friday.

A Social Affair

The Women of Woodcraft were entertained at the home of Mrs. I. G. Singleton Wednesday afternoon. From three to five o'clock. A large crowd of ladies were present, among them Mrs. Wade of Portland. Refreshments were served and the time was spent with music and readings. A delightful time was had by all present.

The ladies departed at five o'clock thanking their hostess for a pleasant afternoon. Mrs. Singleton is a charming lady and entertains her friends with the same manner. Her beautiful home was decorated with roses and maiden hair ferns. While her life is a very busy one, she always finds time to be pleasant to her friends and give them a good hearty welcome.

Outclassed

The Cottage Grove Sentinel boasts of a Jersey cow in that bailwick that gives 24 pounds of milk per day that tests 8% never going below 6%. The test of 8% is good but the yield in quantity is poor. There are plenty of cows in this part of the moral vineyard that will test 6% and upward and 32 to 38 pounds per day which outclasses in yield of butter fat even at a lower test. When you want the real thing come to Falls City.
