Villa vs. U. S.

Contrary to general opinion, the crossing of the American troops into Mexico is no violation of international law. The pursuit and capture of smugglers on American territory by the Canadian authorities offers a precedent for the drastic action of the United States. Few people criticize the chief executive in vigorously pursuing Villa, but it is beyond us how so many papers can consistently back the president in his every move, tho each action be opposed to the previous one.

At the first outbreak of the trouble with Mexico, Mr. Wilson adopted a policy of "watchful waiting;" now he has taken the reins into his own hands and to show these "greasers" how the land lays, his "peace at any price" method of procedure with the lives of approximately two hundred peaceable American citizens in Mexico, and why their deaths did not warrant immediate action as did the Columbus affair is an enigma. It is indeed amusing, if matters were not so serious, to see the Democratic press on one side of the fence one month and on the opposite side the next. Next November the people will show that they have been "humbugged."

Ball Team

The boys of the Students Body met last Tuesday and organized a ball team with Byron Murray as captain, Lester Gardner as coach and E. M. Haley manager. Thursday they again met and under the supervision of their officers began to clean up and smooth over the school ground for the purpose of forming a ball diamond.

The team has had several challenges and it is about time they should begin to practice. It is reported that Dallas wants a game with us on April 15. Watch our smoke.

Some of the pupils of the school were frightened on Tuesday on account of a peculiar movement of the building, resembling the rolling movement of an earthquake; pictures moved on the wall, electric light fixtures and thermometers moved with a motion similar to that felt in the building. There was some wind blowing at the time but not nearly so hard as before or after the movement. Girls cried, brave boys turned pale and teachers looked wise. The flag on the flag staff was so badly shaken that it was necessary for the janitor to remove it to keep the stars from spilling out.

Don't forget to look for the date of the High School play.
