LOGANBERRY JUICE INDUSTRY

The development of the loganberry juice industry at Falls City has been remarkable. Starting four years ago, inexperienced, with limited capital and obsolete machinery, C. J. Pugh now has a loganberry juice factory rated as second best in the State of Oregon. His plant, located on Sheldon Avenue is a model of convenience, simplicity and neatness. Many of the labor-saving devices in use are products of his own inventive genius and better serve their purpose than many higher priced inventions. The manufacture of the juice, from the unloading of the berries in the press room to the final packing for shipment is very interesting. A hydraulic press squeezes the berries and the juice is then conveyed through a pasteurizing apparatus and then stored in five-gallon cans in concentrated form to be bottled for shipment at a later date. Every means possible is employed to facilitate the work and insure a superior quality. Large portable vats containing bottles are near the washer, and the operator cleanses the bottles places them on a belt that in turn carries them to the filling machine. The juice is syphoned into large tanks where it again passes through the pasteurizing apparatus. From the filler it is passed on to the sealers and thence to the label paster where the finishing touches are added and packed in attractive cartons ready for market. The juice is a rich, clear amber color, and makes a delicious drink.

Mr. Pugh has about $10,000 invested in his plant and also owns the Gem Loganberry Farm. This year he has handled something over seventy-five tons and will be able to take care of any crop that may be grown in the future. He finished pressing Aug. 16th, and has been bottling since and it will take six weeks to finish. He employs ten persons and his output is 250 cases per day. He has four cars ready for shipment and one car ordered shipped today.

The growing of loganberries is destined to be one of the most profitable industries in this section. The hill land is particularly adapted to their culture. Three tons per acre can easily be grown which at current prices yields a handsome return.

SMALL BLAZE

Wednesday afternoon a fire was discovered in the roof of a dwelling on Fairview street. The fire caught from the stove pipe that ran through the roof. Chas. Cochran was the first to arrive and prevented the fire from gaining headway until the hose cart arrived. On account of the hose being a little short they were unable to get on the upper side next to the fire and had some difficulty in playing the water on the blaze. It was extinguished with small damage.

The house was occupied by Clarence Spohn and family but only Mrs. Spohn and two small boys were at home when the fire occurred.

 POINTED PARAGRAPHS FROM SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE OF CHARLES E. HUGHES.  It is apparent that we are shockingly unprepared.  When we contemplate industrial and commercial conditions, we see that we are living in a fool's paradise.  Not only have we a host of resources short of war by which to enforce our just demands, but we shall never promote our peace by being stronger in words than in deeds.  We are neither deceived nor benumbed by abnormal conditions. We know that we are in a critical period, perhaps more critical than any period since the civil war.  The administration utterly failed to perform its obvious duty to secure protection for the lives and property of our citizens. It is most unworthy to slur those who have investments in Mexico in order to escape a condemnation for the non-performance of this duty.  It is only through international co-operation giving a reasonable assurance of peace that we may hope for the limitation of armaments.  We have determined to cut out, root and branch, monopolistic practices, but we can do this without hobbling enterprise or narrowing the scope of legitimate achievement.  We demand a simple, business-like budget.  I believe it is only through a responsible budget, proposed by the executive, that we shall avoid financial waste.  We have had brave words in a series of notes, but, despite our protests, the lives of Americans have been destroyed.  WILSON FLEXIBILITY.  We do not see why there should have been any stir in the senate over the discovery that President Wilson has completely reversed himself in the matter of the proposed child labor law. Senator Borah was able to show that Mr. Wilson described this legislation in his "Constitutional Government" as unconstitutional, an "obviously absurd extravagance," carrying the congressional power to regulate commerce beyond the "utmost boundaries of reasonable and honest inference" and making it possible, if sustained, for congress to legislate over "every particular of the industrial organization and action of the country." That, we must confess, has also been the Evening Post's view. But the Evening Post and Senator Borah are old fogies, dating back to the time when it was the custom to have fixed beliefs and principles and stick to them. The senator has evidently not read Mr. Wilson's letter in explaining his change of front on the tariff commission—that it is only a narrow man, whose mind is stupidly closed to new ideas, who does not alter his opinions. By this test Mr. Wilson is obviously one of the broadest minded men this country has ever produced, for he has changed his mind to date on the initiative, referendum, recall, woman suffrage, the tariff commission, tariff for revenue only, a permanent diplomatic service beyond politics, the merit system in the civil service, the proper place of Tammany Hall in the scheme of the universe, child labor legislation, preparedness, Bryan, a continental army—but why continue? It is a long enough list to prove that Mr. Wilson's political views are not fossilized by any fear of inconsistency.—New York Evening Post.

 ADEQUATE NATIONAL DEFENSE DEMANDED  We demand adequate national defense; adequate protection on both our western and eastern coasts. We demand thoroughness and efficiency in both arms of the service. It seems to be plain that our regular army is too small. We are too great a country to require of our citizens who are engaged in peaceful vocations the sort of military service to which they are now called. As well insist that our citizens in this metropolis be summoned to put out fires and police the streets. We do not count it inconsistent with our liberties, or with our democratic ideals, to have an adequate police force. With a population of nearly 100,000,000 we need to be surer of ourselves than to become alarmed at the prospect of having a regular army which can reasonably protect our border, and perform such other military service as may be required, in the absence of a grave emergency. I believe, further, that there should be not only a reasonable increase in the regular army, but that the first citizen reserve subject to call should be enlisted as a federal army and trained under federal authority.—From Mr. Hughes' Speech of Acceptance. *****

Not long since a large fleshy lady went into dry goods store in Portland to purchase a waist. The saleslady was a rather slim flippant sort of a person. After looking through the stock and being unable to find anything of the desired pattern to fit, she told the saleslady that she was sorry to have used so much of her time. The saleslady said, commiseratingly, "Aint it awful to be so big you can't get your clothes ready-made!" "Yes, it is," replied the stout lady, "and if I didn't see so many "skinny" folks who look worse than I do, I should really feel bad about it."
