EMPEROR PAUL I METHOD OF ENDING GREAT WARS

Emperor Paul I, of Russia is said to have been a very eccentric ruler. During the great war between Russia, England, France and Turkey he was desirous of ending the terrible destruction of life and offered a very feasible plan that might prove very satisfactory in settling all international disputes.

His Majesty, the Eupero, perceiving that the European powers cannot come to an accommodation, and wishing to put an end to a war which has raged fourteen years, has conceived the idea of appointing a place to which he will invite the other potentates to engage with himself in single combat on lists which will be marked out; for which purpose they shall bring with them, to act as their esquires, umpires and heralds, their most enlightened ministers and able generals, as Thugut, Pitt and Bernstorff.

If we are to believe the press reports that are allowed to evade the censor's sieve, Germany is the most remarkable nation on earth. Besides maintaining an aggressive campaign in France, entertaining the Russians, dropping bombs from the sky upon inoffensive old men, women and children in England; playing bopeep with her submarines, they have found time to stir up trouble in Cuba and Mexico, filled this country with spies, incited the I. W. W's. and furnished them with real money, and now planning to send spies into Russia to assassinate the leaders. If this all be true they certainly have a different completion bunch to handle their affairs than we have in Washington.
