Married Misery.

The foe of married happiness is inattention. The real wrong to the wife, the real failure of the husband, is when he becomes unconscious of what she is doing for him and what she is in herself. At first her ministries and her affection are delightful to him. Then perhaps they become a thing of course—received, enjoyed in a fashion, but hardly thought of. And sometimes, though not so frequently, the wife becomes unthoughtful of her husband.

Perhaps into most marriages there creeps on one side or on both something of this indifference. Husband and wife live together in the chiefly external relation. He is the breadwinner; she is the housekeeper. They accept each other's good qualities as men wear easy fitting clothes, without noticing. They put up with each other's defects as with a smoky chimney or any other annoyance.

They would confess to no alienation. They have only got used to each other. It is the same "getting used" that robs life of its brightness; that makes us blind to the stars and the clouds and the bright procession of the day and year, because we have seen them so often; that keeps us mostly in a numb, half alive state, from which only occasionally are we roused to feel that we are living in a divine universe and are ourselves divine.—George S. Merriam in "The Man of Today."

The Highest Greatness.

There are different orders of greatness. Among these the first rank is unquestionably due to moral greatness or magnanimity; to that sublime energy by which the soul, smitten with the love of virtue, binds itself indissolubly, for life and death, to truth and duty; espouses as its own the interests of human nature; scorns all meanness and defies all peril; hears in its own conscience a voice louder than threatenings and thunders; withstands all the powers of the universe, which would sever it from the cause of freedom and religion; reposes an unflinching trust in God in the darkest hour and is ever "ready to be offered up" on the altar of its country or of mankind.—William Ellery Channing.

Excuses Don't Pay

Thomas E. Wilson, the Chicago packer, has written an article for the American Magazine in which he gives some of the experiences he has had as head of large companies. He says in the August issue:

"An employer should be slower to fire a man than to hire him. To refuse to employ a man probably does him no great harm, but to discharge him may leave a permanent imprint on his character. He may regard himself as having been tried and found wanting—a failure. I would seldom fire a man for a single mistake. Many men are stronger for having once made a blunder. They have profited by it and are resolved that nothing like it shall ever occur again. I should much prefer to have a man make mistakes—as long as he isn't a repeater—than to make excuses. A little excuse is a dangerous thing. It is a habit that grows on one. A man gets to depend on excuses for careless work instead of striving to do the work properly. The fellow who never has an excuse, even for poor work, shows that he is trying his best to do it right and has at least a clear conscience."

A Cheerful Face.

It is said there is nothing which diffuses itself more quickly in a family than the coolness, indifference and discontent which manifest themselves in the countenances of one of its members. This thought is not absolutely true. There are some things which communicate themselves with as much rapidity and more force. They are a bright smile, a frank and open manner, a cheerful face, a happy heart. There is enough misery in the world without adding to it a single frown. A cheerful face is always welcome.

Thy Duties.

This day thou knowest ten commanded duties, seeest in thy mind ten things which should be done for one that thou doest. Do one of them. This of itself will show thee ten others, which can and shall be done.—Thomas Carlyle.

BE THANKFUL.

I thank thee that the sight of sunlit lands And dipping hills, the breath of evening grass— That wet, dark rocks and flowers in my hands, Can give me daily gladness as I pass. I thank thee that I love the things of earth: Ripe fruits and laughter, lying down to sleep, The shine of lighted towns, the grayer worth Of beating human hearts that laugh and weep. I thank thee that as yet I need not know Yet need not fear the mystery of the end, But more than all, and though all these should go— Dear Lord, this on my knees—I thank thee for my friend. —Juliet Wilbur Tompkins.

Household Helps

For homemade fly paper melt one part resin with one part castor oil in double boiler and spread on tough, stout paper.

When you cook green vegetables and wish to have them look green when served let them cook with the cover off.

When preparing grapefruit for the table cut out the center, fill the cavity with maple sirup and let it stand in the ice box for an hour before serving.

It is often difficult to remove a cake from a pan without breaking it. After the cake has been baked the required length of time place the pan containing same on a wet cloth and let it stand for a few minutes. Then run a knife around between the edge of the cake and the pan and you will have no further trouble.

An excellent way to finish armholes in a fine lingerie waist is to sew the sleeves in by machine; then button-hole around the edges with either a coarse thread or soft floss.

Before washing lace collars baste them closely on a piece of white cloth. They will not be stretched nor torn. If no starch is put in them they will look like new.

Forcing Late Chicks For Winter Egg Laying

Chickens may be forced for early laying by feeding a large proportion of meat in their ration, and their maturity may be delayed by withholding meat and feeding them largely upon corn and like fattening foods, writes a correspondent of the Rural New Yorker.

There are limits, of course, to which these methods can be safely carried, but if it is desired to make early layers of May hatched chicks they should have a liberal amount of meat of some kind or of skim milk in their ration from the start. They will thus develop and "ripen" quickly and will lay correspondingly early.

Some poultrymen feed a dry mash containing one-fourth part by weight of the best beef scrap and keep it constantly before their growing chicks; others keep the scrap in open hoppers, where the chicks can help themselves at will. If young chicks can have free range they will not overeat from hoppers always open before them.

Smartly Said

Some people think that every reform movement should make a noise like an auto truck running to a fire.

The prophet who does not predict trouble usually has a hard time to get a hearing.

It takes two to make a quarrel, but dozens will volunteer to keep it alive.

If you can be affable when you are angry you fool no one and provoke great admiration at the same time.

If all our prayers were answered there would not be much left for the other fellow.

When confronted by an emergency none can retire more gracefully than the jingo.

In these days of simple fare the old fashioned railway traveler who carried his own ham sandwiches may reappear.

It is always difficult for a fat wife to convince people that marriage is not a success.

Light as Chaff

One on the Judge. A western lawyer, it seems, had been so unthinking as to offend a judge, a young man who had not had so much experience as the transgressing member in the practice of the arts of the profession.

Recently in criticizing a ruling of the court the lawyer went beyond the bounds of genuine respect. The court announced in a voice which the offender did not hear distinctly that a fine of $10 was imposed for contempt of court. "What did he say?" asked the lawyer, leaning over the desk of the clerk. He was informed. Thrusting his hand into his pocket, the attorney said: "I'll pay it. I never owed a juster debt."

How It Felt. Fresh from the trenches, an English "Tommy" had just arrived in London for a few days' home leave. As is usually the case, almost the first place visited was a barber shop, says London Tit-Bits. The barber, after scraping away industriously for a few moments, made the usual inquiry: "Razor all right, sir?"

"My good man, if you hadn't mentioned it I should never have known there was a razor on my face."

The barber beamed. "Thank you, sir."

"No," added the soldier reflectively; "I should have thought you were bayoneting the whiskers off."
