Profanity never did any man the least good. No man is the richer, the happier, or the wiser for it. It commends no one to any society. It is disgusting to the refined; abominable to the good; insulting to those with whom we associate; degrading to the mind; unprofitable, needless and injurious in society. Young man, don't be profane.

Mothers, and fathers too, sometimes forget that the active and receptive stage of childhood in the nursery is never surpassed at a later period. The little one is taking impressions every moment, acquiring gentle habits or the opposite, picking up words and sentences, surprising his elders by the faculty with which he learns that what they would rather he should not know. In the baby's home the foundation is laid for the good or bad manners of the mature man.

What's the use of getting into a worry and fret over gossip that been set afloat to your disadvantage by some meddlesome busy-body who has more time than character. These things can't possibly injure you, unless indeed, you take notice of them and in combating them give them character and standing. If what is said about you is true, set yourself right at once; if it is false, let it go for what it will fetch. If a bee stings you, would you go to the hive and destroy it? Would not a thousand come upon you? It is wisdom to say little respecting the injuries you have received

DELIVER US FROM—

○ these no greater good than health and ease?
○ Is there no deadlier enemy than death?
○ Is God a dream to deal with as we please
○ And life only the drawing of our breath?
○ Duty a fever phantom that misleads,
○ The sick convulsion of a straying brain?
○ Let the king's high road choke with tangled weeds
○ If they but barricade our paths from pain!
○ "Give us this day our daily bread,"
○ that prayer
○ We all remember! What comes next? The cry,
○ "Deliver us from sorrow and from loss
○ Who were not made to suffer and to bear."
○ How strangely beat those words against the sky
○ Where stands unchanging a forgotten cross!
○—Amelia Josephine Burr in Outlook.
