Watson's place last Friday, lost control of the wheel and went off the bridge at a point where the banister had not been completed and went headlong to the ground some 20 feet below, but fortunately and almost miraculously escaped injury. This banister should be looked after as there is a number of children who are in a habit of playing on the bridge and such an accident might occur as any time, except that it could hardly be expected that others would get off as luckily as did young Ralph.
