MYRTLE POINT ITEMS

The baby burned in Mr. and Mrs. Claude Millins' one-year-old child. It put its little hand in a hot pan. They brought it in to Dr. Loop, who properly attended to it.

Potato buyers who came from the Bay when they solicit always say, "Don't sell your potatoes until you've seen me, for I have the price that will satisfy thee."

The gentleman or lady who keeps the crossing on Spruce and A streets grumbled surely deserves the thanks of pedestrians who travel that way. The street, (Spruce), belongs to the county and the city won't do it. We have never seen the good angel at work, but the crossing is repaired as often as required for which we are truly grateful. A man.

Mrs. J. W. Hall, of Catching creek, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Endicott, at Wendling, Oregon.

After three months the Bald Hill school closed. The parents and children feel that it has been a successful term.

Dr. Pemberton, who was called to the Dan Cribbins family last week, had a call from Dan this week. He wanted him to cut his finger, which he said was blood poisoned.

Charlie Butler's daughter's daughter was very ill with la grippe. Dr. Pemberton was called. She is reported better.

Mike Wyland has been out and around Portland, Eugene, etc., and he says his next move will be to that "delectable" country, "Nasta" valley, "Kiskayou" county, California.

The name of the new cutter in the City Market is Frank Reimenschneider—not Snyder as announced last week.

J. J. La Point, of Powers, was here last week looking for a location for his family, as Myrtle Point has advantages over many places.

Ben Tracy received a car of brick from his "works" at Arago this week for work here.

Jason Machado Jr. is in Detroit, Michigan, working for his brother-in-law, Will Kearney. Mr. Kearney is the husband of Glenn, the eldest daughter of Jason Machado, Sr.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Smith, of Walla Walla, Washington, were here last week and will be here again to select a ranch.

Jack Barker, son-in-law of Dan Barklow, passed away last week at Bakersfield, California. Mr. Barklow brought his remains here, arriving yesterday. He had been ill here in the Powers' logging camp and Matera Medica removed his tonsils, from the effect of which he never fully recovered. The services were held in the Brethren church and interment was in the Norway cemetery.

Milt Miller has moved from the Lundy property on Maple street to the Lee Weekly place on 6th street. Since the passing of father Miller, the mother will have a home with Milton.

J. B. Campbell, from the Coos Bay side, is installed as the vulcanizer in the L. H. Pearce garage. Mr. Vulcan has some good students and he is one of them.

Jack Hayton, the commandore who owns and runs the North Fork Transportation company, has much business, but his patrons, at least some of them, can't remember his running time so are not at the sundry wharves with their spuds.

Victor P. Morris, superintendent of our schools, went and returned between school hours to his home in Eugene. Went Friday and returned Monday.

Joseph Evernden and Millie Rozelle were united by Rev. Thomas Barklow Sunday and now are under the bonds of matrimony. Long may they remain thus.

Sell Sturtevant, the sick man at his father's home, is reported as likely to "pass" soon.

Charles H. Bunch, father of our Dr. Bunch, paid Myrtle Point a visit yesterday.

Receipts at the Postoffice have been very large the last two weeks—of Sears, Roebuck & Co's., Montgomery Ward & Co's., and others catalogues.

The little victim of rheumatism, Clifton Pulford, is reported better and is now waiting for the sunshine to draw him out.

"If the Mountain wont come to Mo-hamet, Mohamet must go to the Mountain." So the young man—not so very young—went to the Bay. He was "routed" by way of Coquille.

Ben McMullen is making his own spraying fluid. He has a 20 acre orchard on Middle Fork near Bridge.

A remonstrance against the opening of pool parlors on Sunday is being circulated here, but while there is no public reading room or library there will be many who will not feel like signing it. At present there is no place for the homeless.

Mrs. D. A. Huling is quite ill this week.

J. E. Montgomery, commercial superintendent of the Coos and Curry Telephone company, was in town last week looking over the work of the very efficient servants of the company here.

F. E. Skinner, late of Coquille, is here looking for something good and is finding it—dairy ranches.

J. D. Davis, late of Idaho, who recently went to Salmon Mountain with Byron Gillen a few weeks ago, returned Monday, reporting that he left Gillen digging like something awful; that prospects are good and he, Mr. Davis, will return reinforced, and go to it also.

A restless baby caused the father to rise Tuesday night and as he did so he saw a bright light through the window and looking out saw a blaze from a pile of rubbish in a shed joining the house. The blaze was four or five feet high, but it was promptly extinguished by water from buckets passed by other members of the family—no alarm was given and the cause was removed, "thanks to baby."

Powers has troubles of its own; drunken men, board bill jumpers and bootleggers contribute most of it. It is said that drunken men do not make good loggers.

L. J. Roberts was in town this week to purchase 90 rods of fencing, since he has to fence his own in and his neighbors' out.

W. A. Horn, who has a new ranch in the Catching creek country, went up last week and planted potatoes and a line of garden seed. He also set out 40 fruit trees. When he has things a little domestic-looking he will move his family there.

J. D. Clinton is out every day now looking over the roads so that when roadmending time comes he will be ready. Mr. Clinton is the man next to Roadmaster Murdock for this section.

Professor S. S. Smith, a graduate of Reed College at Portland, arrived here Saturday the 18th to succeed Victor P. Morris as principal of our high school, while Mr. Morris becomes superintendent, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of E. W. Smith, who she returned to his home in California.

Sheriff W. W. Gage was over here and up on Catching creek on official business this week. On catching sight of the big officer several said, "Is it

1?" George Lange and wife, of Powers, are here this week visiting friends and relatives.

We seem to be always on the verge of a fuel famine this winter. Henry says he can't get the coal and the wood yard is about empty—and we live in a wood and coal country.

H. A. Chaplin, of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Agricultural Department Dairy Division of the U. S., was here this week looking over the creameries in this part of the valley. Mr. Ford, the regular inspector and instructor, will be here March 1, and with his family will live in the Pulford house on Sixth street.

Myrtle Point has during the last two weeks shipped seven thousand sacks of spuds to Bandon, Marshfield and Powers. More are wanted and more are in the country, but the farmers are wise and will plant more now that there is a greater home and outside demand for them, as well as for other produce.

Prof. Eugene Smith writes that he arrived at his home in Pasadena safely, taking the Kilburn from Coos Bay to San Francisco.

Would Make Them Patriots

In view of the international crisis, the admission of aliens as citizens of the United States by the Lane County Circuit Court will be made more formal than has been the custom in the past, according to announcement made Monday by Judge Skipworth. He has arranged a patriotic program in connection with the admission of seven applicants Wednesday and invited the public to attend. Henry B. Hazard, of Portland, United States Immigration Commissioner, will examine the applicants, among whom there are natives of India, England, Germany and the Scandinavian countries.

Judge Percy R. Kelly, of the Linn County Circuit Court, will administer the oath. Rev. G. H. Parkinson, pastor of the First Methodist church in Eugene will deliver an address on the duty of citizens.

AT BROADBENT.

On Friday evening the Broadbent Literary and Social club met at the school house for regular meeting and debate. The house was well filled, including both rooms, which open together.

The program opened with selections on the New Edison Phonograph, rendered by Mr. Fernley, of the Pacific Drug company, and received with hearty applause and encore. Prof. E. Ray Jones, of the Broadbent school, presided.

The subject of debate was "Resolved that live stock should not be allowed to run at large in Coos county." The judges selected were: Dr. O. H. Clarke, of Myrtle Point, Mrs. Geo. Hermann and A. H. Bender. Those of the affirmative were: O. H. Robinson, Teisch Wagner and Harvey Johnson. The negative: Miss Mina Magness, Miss Minnie Bell and Miss Fannie Hayes.

In the course of the debate it appeared that there was a misunderstanding between the two teams about the term "livestock." At the first meeting of the club, when the question was proposed and decided upon, it was agreed by the members present that hogs were to be excluded from the discussion; but at the second meeting, when the sides were chosen it seems that this limitation was not mentioned, and those selected for the affirmative, not having been present at the first meeting, were not aware of this agreement; hence the misunderstanding. The chairman put the question to the house and it was decided that as the question had been stated, hogs must be included in the discussion.

The Misses Bell and Hayes did very well indeed in producing their argument for the negative, it being an entirely new experience for both of them. The discussion proved very interesting and also quite amusing, one of the most amusing features being, perhaps, the vivid picture portrayed by Mr. Wagner of trying to catch and steer the ungovernable pig. Mr. Wagner shows talent as a comedian.

The decision of the judges was in favor of the affirmative.
