FIRST NATIONAL BANK

The Chronic Catalogue Buyer Opened His Eyes

Fifth Story.

The Rolling Dollar dropped with a satisfied sigh into the grocer's till. "Glad I'm safely back from that trip," he said to the other dollars there assembled.

"That was a risky stroke of Fate that led me off to Marshdale. My wings almost shook off their eagle feathers in an age of fear that I would never get back. Why? Because Marshdale folks trade with Chicago mail order houses, and what chance has one little dollar to get back when about the only adventures possible are in the postoffice cash box or the box of the express company between here and Chicago."

"Well, did somebody steal you back?" "No, sir, but a farmer had a change of heart. I was present at his confession. All I know about it is that he laid me on the table beside a big mail order catalog; and after he had looked at me and at the catalog he wrote a letter which he read to his wife. His letter was about like this:

"Marshdale, Mich., January 15, 1914. Gentlemen—Yours of recent date at hand, also catalogs and circulars offering premiums for distributing same among my neighbors. As you say, it would be a favor to you but I doubt if it would be to my friends. I have dealt with you for some years myself, and I have received no favors. I paid for all I got; in the same length of time I would have gained standing and credit in a home store. You think I am a steady comer, and send me any old goods that are handy on my orders."

"Your catalogs seem to offer some great bargains, but let us see if there are not some things very necessary to the people of our section that are not mentioned in your big book."

"I don't see any reference to paying cash or exchanging goods for wheat, oats, corn, beans, butter, eggs or hay. How much will you pay for cattle, sheep and hogs, f. o. b. Marshdale?"

"We have to have a market and we can't expect to sell to the home merchants if we buy in Chicago."

"How much will you pay to support our schools? How much for building our roads and bridges? For supporting our poor? For the general public expense? Two stores and a brush factory went out of business here last summer, and my taxes are higher this year because those concerns are not here to share up the fixed expenses of local government and public utilities. You got our money and kept it, so those who would have given it back had to quit."

"How much do you give our churches? How much credit will you give me when times are hard? I think I'll trade at home a while. If the home merchant is tricky I can have it out with him face to face, and settle any misunderstanding in half an hour. I have been all winter getting my money back on that deal with you, and now I get only a credit card, which one of your clerks with studied carelessness has mislaid."

"Return the amount without further dickerer or I shall take it out in advertising you and your methods among the folks around here. Yours truly, CARL SCHULTZ."

"Today he drove down to Centerville and spent me on a bill of goods here because there isn't a decent grocery store left in Marshdale." Copyright, 1914.

A Pleasant Social Event.

On Monday afternoon, a large number of the ladies of Coquille wended their way to the home of Mrs. Clyde Gage, in response to cards of invitation sent out last week. The occasion was Mrs. Gage's "Corset Opening Day." Henceforth she will devote herself entirely to this line of business.

From two o'clock to five, the friends came and went, and many were the questions asked and answered, as they inspected the exquisite work, finished and unfinished, and the dainty materials, and many were the hearty good wishes expressed.

The affair was greatly enjoyed by all who participated. This was not a purely business "At Home," you will understand—the social element was largely to the fore.

The living-room, hall and dining-room were beautifully decorated with roses, sweet peas, and carnations, mingled with ferns and other greenery. The goods themselves were very decorative. It was not easy to regard as mere material the artistic drapings of silk and mercerized brocades, and delicate embroideries and laces, all of white and cream and palest pink and blue.

Mrs. Gage's hostess in receiving and entertaining the guests. Delicious refreshments consisting of fruit punch, cakes and wafers, were served in the dining-room by Misses Muriel Landreth and Ada Downs.

Liddell Sprague.

Last Monday at St. James Episcopal church here, Edwin Liddell, of the Powers Meat Market, and Miss Helen May Sprague, formerly a teacher in the Marshfield schools, were united in marriage by Rev. F. G. Jennings. The witnesses of the ceremony were Miss Vera Ray Sprague, of Centralia, Wash., sister of the bride, and John E. Stadden, of Marshfield.

Calling cards 100 for $1.00.

Boys Have Birthday Party.

On Monday evening, June 11th, a number of little folks were invited to spend the evening at the home of Jack and George Lester. The children spent a delightful time playing in the orchard north of the house and were sorry when dinner was announced. But when they entered the dining room their sorrow soon disappeared, and when Jack lighted the candles on the birthday cake a chorus of pleased "Oh's" and "Ah's" arose.

Mrs. Lester was assisted in serving by Misses Nellie Johnson and Hazel Bean. Those present were Hazel Johnson, Ted Myers, Mabel McNair, Leona Carter, Hazel Myers, Ethel McNair, Dena Ellingsen, Donald McGilvery, Clare Beán, Denton Ellingsen, Jessie Johnson, Gladys Myers, Clarence Bean, Paul Dettleson, Merle Miller, Kenneth Jacobsen, Irvin Kime, Norma Willard, Lois Miller, Raymond Dettleson, Jimmy Miller, Eldon Gilman and Jack Lester and George Lester.

Fine Timber for Ships.

H. C. Diers, who has returned from a trip to the Powers district where he and J. D. Meehan were inspecting ore deposits, says that the Smith-Powers Co. is now in some of the finest old growth fir and cedar he ever saw. Trees five and six feet in diameter and towering a hundred feet before the first limbs are in evidence will furnish unlimited quantities of the best ship lumber and timbers that can be desired.—Coos Bay Times.

Inherits a Large Fortune.

Frank B. Waite, the holder of the first mortgage on the Kinney tract, who left Coos Bay for his home at Sutherlin Tuesday, received word while here that his next door neighbor, Paxton Ridgeway, had just inherited the big estate of Sir Alvon Paxton, an uncle. He is of English descent and his inheritance is estimated at an income of $50,000 per year.

$986 Coos County's Share.

Secretary of State Olcott announced at Salem on the 9th the apportionment among the various counties of the funds received from the levy of one-twentieth of a mill for the benefit of county fairs and land products or livestock exhibitions. The tax totaled $43,938.20. The apportionment of Coos county is $986.39, and of Curry $205.39.
