THE ROUNDUP AT ASHLAND ON JULY 3, 4 & 5

Ordinarily the requests for free advertising that come to the Sentinel office speedily find their way to the waste basket. But our remembrance of the elegant hospitality we enjoyed at Ashland last summer makes us more than willing to reciprocate by giving free insertion to the following about the doings they are preparing to have there on the Fourth:

The Ashland Rogue River Roundup, July 3, 4 and 5, this year, will present six world champion riders, bulldoggers and ropers—the greatest aggregation of world champion buckaroos ever gathered together at one roundup. Practically all of the Pendleton winners of last year are signed up to compete, and under the leadership of Del Blanchett sixty cowboys and cowgirls and a herd of sixty bucking horses and steers have already arrived at Ashland to uphold the fame of Eastern Oregon. Klamath county and southeastern Oregon will send the pick of the range, southern Oregon will be represented by a score of riders, northern California will send its best, and for the first time at any Oregon roundup an aggregation of twenty-five riders, ropers and bulldoggers from Texas, Arizona and southern California will compete. The worst buckers and the wildest steers in the west are being gathered for the Ashland show and over two hundred head of horses, steers and bulls will be in the corrals when the roundup opens on July 3rd.

The Rogue River Roundup, while the chief feature, is only one of a score of attractions which will attract an immense crowd to the southern Oregon city for their annual Hyia Hehe, which, by the way, is Chinook Indian jargon for "heap big good time." The greatest display of day and night fireworks on the coast, unfurling of the largest flag in Oregon, patriotic parades miles in length, baseball, continuous band concerts by six bands, including Portland Police Band, baby show, sweet pea show, dazzling electrical illuminations and flag displays on a scale unprecedented, dancing, confetti battles and scores of other features will make the Hyia Hehe one continual "big time."

Sixty-acre Lithia park with its fountains of mineral waters and free auto camp grounds and two sulphur mintoriums offer additional pleasures. The entire Rogue River Valley is joining in the celebration and plans are laid on an immense scale to accommodate and entertain a crowd of eighty thousand people.

Special trains will run from Portland, Coos Bay and northern California.

A Chapter of Accidents.

The Harbor, of North Bend, says: Dr. Phil J. Keiser reports that he has been called upon repeatedly during the past week to give aid to those who have met with accidents.

Will Preston, a logger and well known here, is just coming out of a stupor caused by a serious accident in one of the camps. He will probably recover.

Gus Peterson chopped his ankle with a grubbing hoe necessitating a number of stitches.

Chester Bullard was painfully injured with a cross cut saw while employed in the ship yards. His hand was ripped open, requiring nine stitches.

Ellis Carson, of South Slough, broke the small finger of his right hand, which was jammed between two ties.

Bernard Lillebo was injured while feeding a lath machine in the Beuhner mill. A long sliver pierced his forearm just below the elbow, running entirely through the arm, and between the two bones. He will be laid up a couple of weeks.

Wanna Randle was fixing a coffee grinder today and clipped the end of his first finger off.

The Myrtle Point Bridge.

The Portland Bridge company has completed all arrangements for starting work on the bridge which it is to build at Myrtle Point. E. H. Meith, of that company, has made arrangements for piling and is having equipment shipped in from Portland. He has the steel and cement bought and is assured by the shapers of prompt delivery. He will be able to commence actual construction in 40 days and will start preliminary work much sooner.

Mr. Meith has entered into a contract with the county to build the bridge and have it ready for actual use on December 1st. A penalty of $25 a day is attached for delays.

Smith Still Getting Gold.

J. R. Smith, who has become almost famous in this section as a miner and prospector, was in Coquille last week and while here displayed a couple of bottles which he said contained in the neighborhood of $1,000. To say that the display was beautiful does not fully express it and the writer sure had a feeling of envy when Mr. Smith said it was the result of less than three months' labor on the part of himself and son. The gold was mostly in the form of irregular nuggets from the size of a myrtle nut down to that of the head of a pin. Very little dust appeared in the bottles and he stated that but little dust had been taken out at the present place of working.

The ground from which this gold came is located at the head of Rock creek, a tributary of the South Fork of the Coquille and is located within a mile of the summit of the divide between the watersheds of the Coquille and the Rogue. Smith and his son have four claims there and he estimated that they have enough ground to keep them busy for many years. Owing to being so near the summit the water supply is limited and not sufficient for any large operations, hence the property is not for sale but will be worked on a small scale when he has no larger matters on hand.

Smith has reported many discoveries of gold in Coos and Curry counties during the past two years—so many that various skeptical remarks as to their authenticity have been made—but as a fair judge of the filthy lucre in its virgin state the writer has no doubt that the sample shown here Friday all came from the same ground and that it must of necessity lie very near the source of supply as none of the nuggets show any great sign of erosion. There is but little question that Mr. Smith is very near to the finding of the chimney or blow out from which this gold was thrown and when this discovery is made it will be equal to any ever made in southwestern Oregon.

Deputy Sheriff Clyde Gage who has spent some time mining in that country stated that he knew the ground well and that he also believes Smith is very near the source of the placer gold found in that section. He also has several claims on Rock creek, several miles below Smith's location, and contemplates a visit to that section some time this summer. Mr.

Smith made no statement regarding platinum but we do not think this is the same discovery which was reported by Inman as having made in that section recently.

Mr. Smith went on to Bandon Friday where he expects to meet some mining men from the south who have come up to look over another discovery recently made by him. He has a call to eastern Oregon this summer to expert a mine and evolve a system of profitable operation which will occupy the greater part of the summer. He will return to Rock creek as soon as the water situation will warrant and will probably remain there during the winter.

Coquille 33 Years Ago.

Here's an item about Coquille from the files of the Coos Bay News published June 25, 1884, just 33 years ago, which will be of interest to many of our older residents:

"We visited Coquille City lately, and the great improvement in the town during the last two years is certainly remarkable. In that time it has grown from a scanty scattering of sun burned box shanties to a neat and respectable town of between four and five hundred inhabitants. Front street can boast of two fine hotels, two hardware stores, two drug stores, three or four general merchandise stores, two millinery shops, post office and two neatly arranged soda water establishments, etc. On the river bank is situated Herman's saw mill, which keeps quite a number of the residents employed. Back from the river and Front street will be noticed the Odd Fellows' hall, the school and church buildings, A. G. Aiken's new residence and Dr. Angel's building, as well as a large number of neatly finished and cosy homes, all of which are occupied and many more needed to accommodate those who are anxious to locate in this thriving locality. Considering the recent growth of the town, the streets are in remarkably good order, for which Mr. Buck, their energetic road supervisor, is entitled to special mention. Viewing the whole town as it now stands, it presents a neat, healthy and respectable appearance, reflecting credit on the inhabitants who take a commendable pride in the advancement of Coquille City."

Work on Perham Contract.

Wayne Goodman, an employe on the Perham road contract, met with a serious accident on the Marshfield road last Wednesday which, while it will lay him up for a time, did him no lasting injury. He was riding on the running gear of a wagon leading his team when they met an auto which pulled to the side of the road to allow him to pass. After the wagon had passed the auto the led team reared up and rushed on the wagon, throwing Goodman to the ground and seriously trampling him. Walter Crook, who was driving the car, immediately turned about and brought the injured man to this city where he received medical attention. An examination showed no broken bones, but a badly bruised condition from which he has recovered sufficiently to be on the street.

For the Fourth of July.

"For the person to whom patriotism means noise, we seriously suggest a hammer and a tin pan," reads a bulletin State Fire Marshal Wells has issued in which he urges the people of Oregon to make the coming Independence Day a "Fireless 4th." He advises all citizens to exercise care in handling fireworks for, "It is better to be safe than sorry," as the bulletin says.

Uncle Jeff Snow Says:

Jud King, who lives in Washington City, and sorter looks after the general health of the 'neshative in this and European countries, had wrote to me askin' if any of the statesmen of Oregon is opposed to the same. I got my granddarter, Jerushy, who is visitin' us right along and runs a typewriter fer fun, to write him back fer me to say that since last 'lection the Oregon statesman who would publicly express
