GREAT STRIKE IMMINENT.

Southern Pacific Shopmen's Demand May Result Seriously.

One of the greatest railroad strikes in the history of the country, involving all of the Harriman system of railroads, is imminent as a result of the refusal of the management of these lines to treat with the Federation of Mechanical Trades.

The shop workers on these roads throughout the West are demanding that a general strike order be issued at once, and it was feared that they will take the subject into their own hands and quit their posts without receiving the sanction of union officials.

A strike of these mechanical trades, according to estimates of union leaders, would directly involve 25,000 men and throw many thousands of others into idleness. If the shop workers quit not a wheel will move on the entire Harriman system.

Wouldn't Be Forgotten.

Here is the way a brother editor has of dunning his subscribers: "Gentle reader, you who owe for this paper you are reading, as well for several of its ancestors, did you ever see an editor's pocketbook? Well, it is just as fallible and prone to emptiness as those of other common mortals. The newspaper business hasn't yet been brought to a degree of perfection that it can be run without expense, and until that is successfully done we shall be under the painful necessity of asking you for a little cash now and then, especially now. We have been patient—in some cases long suffering—knowing that your pocketbooks were about as lean and lank as our own. When the big, round dollars begin to jingle in your pockets, please remember that vacuum in the editorial purse."
