Expense of Packing To Be Reduced.

A new innovation in the matter of an apple packing and shipping plant is now in course of construction in Hood River and the plant will be the largest apple packing house in the United States, covering a floor space of 75x275 feet. Eight of the largest orchardists in the Hood River valley are uniting in the erection of the building. This grower controls several thousand acres of bearing orchard that lays adjacent to the packing plant. The new building will be built just north of Van Horn station on the line of the Mount Hood railroad and will be built parallel with the track, so that after the fruit has been packed it can be placed directly into the car without further handling. It is planned by the growers interested to have the apples all hauled directly from the field into the large building. It is estimated that the expense in handling the apple crop in this manner will be greatly reduced over the methods of the individual packing plants. Those engaged in the enterprise are independent shippers.

The tallest one-piece flagstaff in the world was taken from an Oregon forest in Clatsop county. Its length is 219 feet and 5 inches, and its thickness at the butt is 36 inches and 15 inches at the top.

This flagstaff has not the slightest blemish or imperfect defect in it and it has been presented to the Astoria Centennial by the Whitney Company, Ltd., of Portland, to be used on the Centennial grounds to hoist the stars and stripes into the zephyrs above Oregon's bounteously yielding terra firma. The staff was taken from Blind's Slough, where the Whitney Company operates a logging camp, and is of the variety of timber known as Oregon yellow fir.

The longest one-piece flagstaff in the world is now on the site of Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition at Seattle, where it was used as a flagpole during the fair which was held in 1909. Its measurement is 195 feet. The third longest is at the old Lewis & Clark fair grounds which was held in Portland in 1905. The length of this flagstaff is 185 feet.—The Cornucopium.

How Mail Order Houses Work. According to the report of the Lane county delegate to the national convention of the rural letter carriers held in Milwaukee last month a Chicago mail order house rounded up the whole convention, wives, sweethearts and all, carted them off to Chicago for a whole day, gave them a grand time and sent them back home with the expectation that each delegate would give the firm a free notice through the local papers, as Mr. Tower has done in his story written in the Register and appearing, somewhat abridged, elsewhere in this issue. And the people wonder how these mail order houses get such a hold upon the rural sections of the country.—Eugene Register.

You've heard the story of the farmer who when his barn was burning and neighbors were rescuing his stock and machinery rushed in with a screw driver and began taking the hinges off the oats bin door. They thought he was crazed and tried to drag him away but he fought them off. He emerged with the door in his arms just before the haymow fell. "Why did you do it?" he was asked. "It's got my accounts on it for twenty years" he replied.

Dean Bexell of the State Agricultural College is putting out a book on the business idea of farming. The cost of production of crops, household accounts, special records and the application of bookkeeping to the need of the farmer are all discussed. They say it beats an oats bin door forty rods.

Injunction Case Dismissed. The injunction suit of the Booth-Kelly Lumber company vs. the city of Eugene, seeking to restrain the city from using the waters of the McKenzie river for the electric power plant near Walteville, was dismissed by Judge John S. Coke, of Marshfield, last week, and this ends the case which has been in the circuit court for about two years.

Poverty No Bar at U. of O. Burns Powell, of Monmouth, Earl Jones, of Dallas, and Leon Ray, of Eugene, three of the most prominent seniors at the University of Oregon, are demonstrating that any high school student, who has the necessary ambition and energy, can not only get a higher education without financial aid, but also may win the highest political, literary, and forensic honors of the college.

Powell, editor of the Oregon Emerald, and president and leader of the Glee club, by playing in the town orchestra, and doing other work in the summer, has thus far kept the wolf from the door, although he is entirely dependent upon his own resources for his support.

Jones, president of the Student Y. M. C. A., and editor of the Engineering Magazine, not being gifted with musical ability, has earned his way by the more humble vocations of clerking, store sweeping, and milking a family cow. Despite his somewhat burdensome outside work, Jones finds time to take part in student activities. In the summer time Jones digs sewers or does anything else that will turn him an honest penny for use in the winter.

Ray, president of the Student Body, and member of one of Oregon's champion debating teams, has followed the adage, "A penny saved is a penny earned," and by batching in a little cabin out in the suburbs of Eugene, has cut down living expenses to minimum. His board bill averages about $6.50 a month.

Dolls and Artificial Flowers Which Change Color. The principal uses of cobalt in the United States are in making glass and pottery. A beautiful blue is given to glass by the oxide of cobalt. Sympathetic inks, according to a report of the United States Geological Survey, are made from cobalt, acetate, chloride, and nitrate that are colored when heated or colorless when cold. This interesting phenomenon is due to the change in color of the salts on the absorption of water. When dry they are blue and easily seen on paper; when damp they are pink; and when dilute, colorless. A puzzling application of this principle may be in a doll whose dress is blue in dry weather or when the doll is held in the steam of a tea kettle. Artificial flowers are made to show the same effect.

We will give away the first of each month a $25.00 tailor-made suit. Each $1.00 purchase entitles you to one chance. The Woolen Mills Store.
