W. J. Cary, Who Favors Government Telegraphs.

Congressman William Joseph Cary of Wisconsin, who agrees with Postmaster General Hitchcock that Uncle Sam should own the telegraph and telephone lines, has introduced a bill with that object in view. Mr. Cary is a Republican of the progressive brand. During the famous uprising against Speaker Cannon he was a leading insurgent and is distinguished in other ways. It is said that he mails more free documents than any man in the house and that his main diversion is chewing tobacco.

A native of Milwaukee, his youthful days were filled with hardships. At the age of thirteen he was left an orphan with other children and began work as a messenger boy, the younger children being placed in an asylum. At eighteen he was a telegraph operator and at nineteen he took the younger children from the orphan asylum and gave them a home. The future congressman got into politics by being elected an alderman in Milwaukee. Next he was chosen sheriff and at the first trial of the Wisconsin primary election law was nominated and elected to congress. Congressman Cary is forty-seven years old and is serving his third term.

The Governor of West Virginia.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has no warmer supporter than Governor William E. Glasscock of West Virginia. While on a recent visit to New York he urged the colonel to announce his candidacy for chief executive of the nation, with what success has not been made public, but on his departure for home he declared his purpose to work for a Roosevelt delegation from West Virginia.

Governor Glasscock is fifty years old and is the thirteenth governor of the commonwealth of West Virginia. He is a native of the state, of hardy Scotch stock, and his boyhood days were spent on a farm. For a time he taught school and then for a number of years was clerk of the circuit court of his county. While there he studied law and at the close of his term began the practice of his profession at Morgantown. Soon he became recognized as one of the leaders of the bar and enjoyed a large practice. In 1905 he was appointed collector of internal revenue for West Virginia, continuing in that position until nominated for governor in 1908. His term of office expires next year.

Why She Was His Favorite Author. Not long ago a friend asked Frank Doubleday, the head of the publishing firm of Doubleday, Page & Co., who was his favorite author.

"Neltje Blanchan," promptly replied the publisher. And he referred to the author of "Nature's Garden," "Bird Neighbors" and "The American Flower Garden."

The friend was surprised until later, when he found out that "Neltje Blanchan" is in private life Mr. Doubleday's wife. "Neltje" is her first name and "Blanchan" is her grandmother's name. Before marriage Mrs. Doubleday was Neltje de Graff of Dutch descent.—Ladies' Home Journal.

LOVERS' RACE FOR FREEDOM

Russian's Daring Plan to Win a Girl From Serfdom.

More than half a century ago, before the serfs were emancipated in Russia, the Count and Countess Gedeonovsky owned a beautiful girl, Liza. Ivan Panshine, who had inherited a fortune from his father, a merchant, fell in love with her, and his love was returned.

One morning Count Gedeonovsky upon opening his mail received an offer from Panshine of 5,000 rubles for Liza, the young man stating that he wished to marry her. Liza, who knew the offer was before her master, was listening at the door, peeping through a crack to hear and see what chance there was for her and her lover's happiness. Her heart sank within her when she heard the count explain:

"What impudence! This man, whose father grew rich beside me while I grew poorer every day, now thinks to deprive me of my most valued serf. Liza, Liza! Come here!"

When Liza came the count showed her the letter and asked her if it had been written with her consent. She admitted that it had, whereupon she was dismissed by her master with the words, "I will teach you how to form plans without consulting me." Then he wrote a letter to Panshine declining the offer and warning him never to approach Liza under penalty of the law both for himself and her. Panshine knew what this meant. The count was in favor of the government, and a word from him with a trumped up charge would be sufficient to send both the lovers to Siberia.

Panshine, who was a determined fellow, pondered long seeking for some plan to possess himself of Liza. At last he concluded to fight the count with his own method. He would make a charge against Liza of being a member of a band of revolutionists, get her into his possession and carry her beyond the borders of the empire.

Panshine knew well the corruption of Russian officials. He approached one of them whom he had long known, Mikhailovich, and made him an offer of 10,000 rubles if he would arrest Liza and then secretly turn her over to her lover, to be carried beyond the borders of Russia.

The offer was accepted. Panshine sold his estate and sent the proceeds, except what he needed to help him in his flight, to a bank in America. When he had arranged for relays of horses to cover the distance to the Prussian border, a hundred miles, all was ready for the attempt.

One evening Mikhailovich appeared at the count's estate and read a warrant for the arrest of Liza on a charge of conspiracy. The count was astonished. He dared not resist an officer; but, suspecting a plan to get his serf out of his hands, as soon as a drosky could be got ready he drove after the officer and his charge. He had not gone far before he came upon a drosky overturned, Mikhailovich being in the snow crying for help and Liza nowhere to be seen. As soon as the count could stop Mikhailovich's cries, which he kept up as long as he dared, the officer said that he had been set upon by Panshine and a number of his friends and the girl taken from him. Fortunately for the count, he had the best horse in his stables.

Liza was astonished at her arrest and, supposing that her master had indignity it, was in despair. When suddenly a drosky turned from a byroad, Panshine jumped out and she was transferred to his conveyance her distress was turned into an exciting hope. She asked for no explanation, well knowing that liberty and happiness were now to vie with a prison.

Panshine had studied the route and made his preparations accordingly. He had with him petroleum, cotton and pitch pine for the purpose of burning bridges after he had passed over them. Reaching a bridge across a branch of the Vistula, he fired the structure. It was in flames when the count appeared. Hesitating a moment, he dashed through the flames and across. The lovers had gone on, but were now only half a mile in advance. Nevertheless they had fresh horses, while the count's horse had followed them for twenty miles.

The count, realizing that he must get a change, stopped at a farm long enough to do so, then pressed on. He felt sure that they would take the nearest road to the border, through Warsaw, and did not stop to ask their direction. From Warsaw but one road led straight eastward, and he took this road. Coming soon after to another branch of the Vistula, he saw that the bridge was in flames. Here he was delayed till he could find a ford, when he continued the pursuit, getting fresh horses wherever he could find them. When he reached the border he saw the fugitives passing it but a few hundred yards ahead of him.

Panshine and Liza did not know that they were in Germany until they saw a man in German uniform. Then they clasped each other in an embrace. The count saw it and turned about. He knew that he was beaten and did not care to have them see his discomfiture.

"Oh, Ivan," said Liza, "how could you take such a risk?"

"By taking it there was hope; by not taking it there was no hope," he replied.

"But the prisons!" she exclaimed.

"Never mind prisons, sweetheart. We are going to a land of freedom."

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Fred Huntington, Strongest Man at Harvard.

Fred Huntington, captain of the Crimson hockey team, who played center and fullback on the football team, is Harvard's strong man. He heads the list of the ten strongest men in the university for the first half of the college year, made from tests participated in by over 500 students. Huntington's total of 1,303 points, however, is ten points under the record of F. H. Leslie, who headed the list last year and who is second this year with 1,299. Leslie and Tudor Gardner, who is third with 1,132, and H. B. Gardner, who is tenth with 1,040, were also members of last year's football eleven.

Hartzell Sure of His Job.

Roy Hartzell, whose game at third was a part of the sensational play for the New York Highlanders last season, may be sent to the right garden next season if Al Dolan continues the good impression he started last fall. Hartzell's rejuvenation when he joined the Yankees was the surprise of the American league. Not only did he field better, but his stick work far surpassed anything he had ever shown while a member of the St. Louis Browns. He is credited with breaking up more games for the Highlanders in 1911 than any other one man on the team.

Manager Wolverton does not intend to lose the everyday services of such a good batsman. Harry Wolter, the California speedster, is a grand outfielder. He covers more ground than any other gardener with the Yanks and on this account may be played in center, Hartzell taking his place in right.

Australia Fond of Lawn Tennis.

A report of the Australasian tennis championship held at Melbourne in conjunction with the Victoria championship tourney furnished surprising information. This joint tournament was finished the first week in December, when the finals of sixteen different events were contested.

In Newport last year at the United States national championship tournament 202 entries required 200 matches, and in consequence the American authorities are worried on account of its unwieldiness and a movement is now on foot to limit the number of competitors, but in 1910 the Australasian championship required 357 matches, and last season the number exceeded 400. This shows the tremendous hold the game has on the sport loving people of that country.

New Yorkers Pay Fortune For Fights. During five months New York state fight fans has paid $355,408.70 to see boxing bouts. From this sum the state treasury has been enriched $17,770.

About 2,000 boxers have earned money under the operation of the Frawley law. About 1,500 club attaches are regularly employed under the Frawley law supervision of boxing.

Since Sept. 1 last 627 boxing shows, or more than 3,000 bouts, have been conducted in this state.

There are fifty-three regularly licensed boxing clubs in the state, thirty-four of which are in Greater New York.

Seventy-five World's Records Made.

Counting odd distance events, nearly seventy-five world's records in all lines of sport were established during 1911. It affords a striking proof of the growing love for the great outdoor activities and appreciation of the pleasures of physical exercise.

Minnesota to Meet Penn State.

University of Minnesota's football squad will meet the Pennsylvania state team in Minneapolis next fall. It has been announced, in one of the two games with eastern teams for which the Minnesota athletic authorities are planning.

The Harder Task. Senator Root at a luncheon at a Washington country club said of war: "Our arbitration treaties come none too soon. The world is getting tired of war. This fact was well brought home to me the other day by the remark of an English diplomat. 'He said that at the end of the Boer war two Unionists were wrangling at a dinner. 'I' said the first Unionist, a lieutenant of volunteers—I went to the war and defended my country.' 'Tshaw! What of that?' the other retorted. 'I stayed in my country and defended the war.'—St. Louis Globe.

Summons. In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Lane County. Harry M. Wheeler, Plaintiff, vs. Lottie E. Wheeler, Defendant. To Lottie E. Wheeler, Defendant above-named: In the name of the State of Oregon you are hereby summoned and required to appear and answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled Court and cause within six weeks from the date of the first publication of this summons, and if you fail to appear and answer the summons as herein required, for want thereof, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in his said complaint, which is for a decree of said Court forever dissolving the bonds of matrimony existing between the plaintiff and the defendant, and for such other and further relief as to the Court may seem equitable and just.

This summons is published once a week for six successive and consecutive weeks in The Sentinel, a newspaper of general circulation, published at Cottage Grove, Oregon, by order of Hon. L. T. Harris, Judge of the above entitled Court, made on the 10th day of February, 1912. The first publication of this Summons is on the 15th day of February, 1912, and the last publication thereof will be on the 28th day of March, 1912. J. S. MEDLEY, Attorney for Plaintiff.
