WOMEN PERAMBULATORS HAVE BUSY TIME

Dorena one day the past week and spent the time between trains in tramping around the mill and logging camps. They do say that there isn't a patch of mud up there as big as your hand that didn't bear the impress of dainty and pedantic feminine footsteps, unless, possibly, it was in places where there was sufficient evidence to warrant the belief that the ladies had not always strictly adhered to the tenets of their faith and belief and had unpremeditatedly and with no ulterior motive, unceremoniously, unexpectedly, but none the less firmly, sat down in the mud, precipitately and undecorously, such breach of the etiquette of the club having been caused by a neglect to observe the motto of the club, "Keep Your Feet Underneath You."

Taken altogether the afternoon was a pleasant, exhilarating and somewhat hilarious one. The publication of the names of those who composed the party is forbidden, but Mrs. C. E. Jones and the Misses Wohrer, Iverson and Wilkie were in Dorena on the day mentioned and might not be adverse to telling the secret to just one or two friends upon the assurance that it would go no further.

LIBRARY BENEFIT IS BIG HIT

LADIES DO THEMSELVES PROUD IN IMPERSONATIONS.

Two Playlets Are Too Funny for Anything.—Gowns Are Ludicrous.—Neat Sum Is Netted.

"A Man's Idea of a Woman's Club" was the feature, and was a clever take-off in every way.

Mrs. H. A. Miller as president gave weight and dignity to the position, Mrs. Caldwell as secretary, in a manish costume; was a headliner, as was also Mrs. Jury as the old maid in the hobble skirt and Mrs. Abrams as the "my husband" woman. Mrs. Kinter as the guard was active every moment and "second" to none in the cast. Mrs. Mackin as Mrs. Society, Mrs. J. C. Johnson as Mrs. Hard Times and Mrs. Compton as Mrs. Town Knocker all deserve special mention. Mrs. Waterhouse as Mrs. Vanderbilt Green sustained the character well and in the second act gave an original composition that was excellent.

The seat sale was large and the library fund was augmented by a neat sum.
