So Much Like Lincoln

J. Adam Bede, in Bede's Budget

When the scandal in the postoffice department at Washington was at its height a few years ago, President Roosevelt wrote a scathing arraignment of Mr Tyner, who had peen postmaster general under Grant, but at this time held a subordinate position as solicitor. The fever was on the public, and everybody accused was presumed to be guilty until his innocence was established before a legal tribunal. In due course Mr. Tyner, a feeble old man in the eighties, was indicted by the grand jury for the district of Columbia. The trial came on without delay, for there was need of victims that the ruler of the land might be great and honored among his people. Each morning for about three weeks the accused man in his fallen state might have been seen turning the wheels of his invalid chair as he worked his way into the court house. Finally a verdict was reached, but in spite of the president's accusation and the excited condition of the public mind, it was a verdict of acquittal. Mr. Tyner went to his humble home to die, and from his sick bed he wrote the president asking that he withdraw what he had said and let him pass away in peace without a stain on his name to disgrace his family. But the dying request has never been answered. All of which shows that Mr. Roosevelt is so much like Lincoln.

In the autumn of 1905 a young man who had recently entered the employ of the government was delivering some official matter for the treasury to a bureau in the suburbs. In doing so he ran his electric auto past the president's carriage. Secret service men on bicycles held him up. He was new in the Capitol City and didn't understand what their action meant, for he hadn't recognized the president's turnout. Some words passed, and the matter was brought to the attention of the president. The next day the president amended the civil service rules so that a cabinet officer could dismiss a clerk without a hearing, and then had the secretary of the treasury dismiss the young man under a rule that did not exist when the act was committed. Soon, however, it was discovered that the clerk had a good record in the Spanish war, as his father had in the Civil war, and the soldiers stirred up so much trouble that in a month or so he was reinstated. He had a little family that he had just located in Washington and greatly needed the salary which his humble position afforded, but the president cared nothing for that. To have sympathy is to be a mollycoddle. He is so much like Lincoln!

When President Roosevelt went down the Mississippi with the waterway excursion, near the close of his term, he brutally and wrongly ordered a pilot dismissed. There was no just cause for his anger. However, there was liquor on the boat, which shows that he was so much like Lincoln.

When Senator Proctor of Vermont died, with whom the president had had some slight differences, and he was asked if he wasn't sorry, he replied that he was "sorry that it wasn't Hale." This illustrates how very much he was like Lincoln.

Again, when he scolded General Miles in the presence of many guests in the White House, no one could help seeing how strikingly he resembled Lincoln.

Like the boys from Utah he and Lincoln must be twins on their father's side.

The Gold Hill News Boycott.

Because the Gold Hill News printed the facts regarding the infamous Gold Hill school scandal, Merrit & Co., Lane & Co. and D. H. Miller, as will be seen by tnis issue of the paper, have withdrawn their advertising patronage therefrom and the publisher of the paper has been told that he will be compelled to walk out of town. W. G. Myers also signed the compact by which these merchants agreed to deprive The News of one of its main sources of revenue, but as Mr. Myers has not carried an advertisement in his home paper for some several months, and never to any appreciable extent, his assumption of the role of a boycotter is not to be seriously considered. However, the gratuitous publicity which must come to him by reason of his action will at least serve to let the people of Jackson county know that he is on earth. The other three of the boycott's quirumvirate are also in line for at least the usual free advertising generally given those who attempt to squelch the printing of news or prevent an open discussion of public matters in the newspapers. Full many a boycott is born to blush unseen, and accomplish its purpose qnsung, but such is not to be the case with this particular boycott.—Gold Hill News.

Yoncalla Notes.

Last Saturday night about 9 p. m. robbers broke into the section boss's car and stole about $35.00 in cash, a revolver, and several other articles.

Miss Sue Burt is visiting friends in Cottage Grove.

Little Walter Jones earned 40 cents one day this week picking luscious wild strawberries. New, just think of that! What other section of country can show that much pleasure and profit for a boy? The little fellow was justly proud of his pick.

Albert Helliwell was up from Cottage Grove yesterday.

The Elkhead postoffice was brought to town Monday and turned over to Postmaster Samler. The office will be temporarily suspended, perhaps permanently. Bud Lovelace, who has been postmaster for ten years past, has moved to Idaho and no provision has been made for his successor.

A. E. Lovelace of Elkhead and D. Hanan of Yoncalla loaded their goods the first of the week and departed for Idaho. Mr. Lovelace goes to Cottonwood and Mr. Hanan goes to Culdesac. These gentlemen have lived here many years and they and their families are held in high esteem. Their departure is regretted by their many friends who wish them quantities of success in their new homes. The reason Idaho has taken their eyes is because their selected location is much similar to our own in products and general appearance.—Times.

Annual School Meeting.

The annual school meeting will be held Monday, June 17th, at 2 o'clock p. m., at which time a director will be selected for three years and a school clerk for one year. Other business may come before the meeting.

Think Body Seen That of Young Deitz.

H. Chezem is one of those who does not believe that the report of the body of a man drifting from the McKenzie into the Willamette is either a fabrication or a mistake. He suspects that the body was that of Clarence Deitz, son of John Deitz of Wisconsin, of Cameron Dam fame. Deitz worked for Mr. Chezem, but seems to have been prospecting and to have had some money. He negotiated for the purchase of Mr. Chezem's farm on Spencer creek, but on Tuesday, May 21, the day upon which the deal was to have been closed, he disappeared. Mr. Chezem is inclined to believe that it was his body which passed down the river in the twilight.—Guard.

BIG SURPRISE TO MANY IN COTTAGE GROVE

Local people are surprised at the quick results received from simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adlerika, the German appendicitis remedy. The New Era Drug Store states that this simple remedy antisepticizes the digestive system and draws off the impurities so thoroughly that a single dose relieves sour stomachs and constipation instantly.
