WANTED: MEN

SELECTED

The world is looking for men, today,
For men who are clean and are true;
For those whose hearts are in the right place,
Who go 'long the road with a smile on the face—
I say, is it looking for you?

The world is calling for men, today,
With "Love" as their watchword, not "Hate;"
Who will reach out their hands to lift others up,
To the hungry give food, to the thirsty a cup—
When it calls, will you be too late?

The world is looking for men, today,
Who cannot be swerved from the right;
Who hold like anchors, 'gainst buffeting wave
Of malice and envy and wrong; who are brave—
When it looks, will you be in sight?

The world has a mission for men, today,
For men who are earnest and strong;
It wants them to lift the load from the weak,
And words of hope and courage to speak—
In this work will you go along?

The world has a place for men, today,
No, not in the great hall of fame;
But down on the ground where people live,
Who need the help you alone can give—
I say, shall I put down your name?

The world is a part of you, my man,
And you are a part of it, too;
The things that make up the whole span of life—
The joy and the pain, the love and the strife—
Belong not alone, then, to you.

The other man's lot is best, you think?
That depends on the point of view;
Just take his sorrow and give him your joy,
Trade your weal for his woe, and I think, my boy,
The balance will all favor you.

Made it for yesterday and today,
But yesterday you were asleep;
Today, with your hope, your strength and your smile,
You can make the world happier the while
Your place in its ranks you keep.

Then, when the world is looking, today,
For men who are good and true,
Be not the laggard, but give it your name;
Stand firm in the line, your God is the same
Who made all the world for you.

IT PAYS.

It pays to be decent. There is a law of morals as of vegetation. The spiritual mind understands it and conforms to it; the worldly mind, without spiritual grasp, combats it, succeeds for a time, then totters.

The young man (or young woman) who neglects to conform his life to principles that have been tried and not found wanting, who neglects to "lift up his eyes unto the hills," who has permitted his feet to carry him along paths that run to cesspools, need never expect to gain the heights; and if by chance he should begin to rise, it will be only for a day, because, being unaccustomed to climbing rugged paths, he will stumble. We acquire the habit of overcoming obstacles only by practice.

It pays to be decent, not only from the standpoint of personal character, but in our treatment of others.

The young man who desires to win real success in life must conform to the moral law, for "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge."

"My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not." Thousands have given consent and repented after. They chose to be "filled with their own devices," rather than "understand righteousness and judgment." The Lord "is a shield to them that walk in integrity;" that is, according to the true principles of life. There is no short cut to success. It must come with growth, and character is the cornerstone.

"My son, forget not my law for length of days, and years of life, and peace, shall they add to thee."

Here is the result of living on a high plane. It is a promise from the Lord to the young man, and it includes "peace."

Who can grasp "the peace that passeth all understanding," except the young man who has decided "to cleanse his ways," to "put away a froward mouth," to "let thine eyelids look straight before thee."

"Let all thy ways be established. Turn not to the right hand nor to the left; remove thy foot from evil." And so runs the law for success, one of the foundation stones of which is decency.

Character-building is a long process, but once the character is made, it can never be torn down. Malignment will strike it and glance off; jealousy may attempt to mar it, but without result. Character is a fortress that cannot be taken, not even by battering rams.

Do you say mean things about your neighbor? Quit it. Are you seeking to get ahead by undermining another? Quit it. Do you enjoy spreading a reproach about another? Quit it. Get out into the open, "establish your ways," and then go on your way. In twenty years it will count—not in two years. Don't get impatient in building character. It took ages for the stream to cut the canyon.

Surely this is an age of progress and justice perches high when a Minneapolis judge awards $350 damages to the father of a six-year-old miss who knocked a doctor's optic out of first class commission for several weeks by throwing a stone at him, and who was quite effectually spanked by the naturally irate doctor as soon as he could get hold of her sufficient ly to properly reverse her for the performance. The father's claim was that the child was made nervous thereby and permanently injured. 'Twas not thus in the olden days that nervous wrecks were created, for all the kids were spanked regularly and irregularly; usually and most effectively, however, by those who felt the responsibility for their behavior—their parents. The practice was then considered a commendable one, it was so stimulating and quickening to the circulation and never failed to be followed by a genial improvement in everyday behavior.

Here is a statement from the U. S. department of agriculture which should set every farmer to thinking: A ton of wheat, worth $22, removes from the soil $7.50 worth of plant food. A ton of butter worth $500, takes less than 50 cents worth of plant food from the soil. This is proven by scientific tests that cannot be questioned. The profit and the soil preservation is in dairy and farming. But still the dread of milking time removes the danger of all the farmers giving up wheat raising and making a shortage in the world's bread supply.

Petitions are being circulated for an initiative bill to abolish capital punishment for conviction of murder in the first degree and to substitute therefor life imprisonment at hard labor. This is the bill prepared at the instigation of Governor West and is in charge of the "League to Abolish Capital Punishment." It is worthy of the support of every voter with a drop of red blood in his veins.

John D. Rockefeller's income is estimated at $140 a minute. That's one thing that makes socialists out of otherwise sensible people.

Things We Think

Things others think, and what we think of the things others think.

When men can be made good by law there will be no need of the law.

If we only attempted to do those things which our contemporaries acknowledge that we are able to do, progress would come to a standstill. Do not be discouraged by ridicule.

We waste energy in yelling for help that should be used in crowding to the front.

Reform does not always perform. Give us action.

With the reported sausage trust, everything of which food is made is under control.

Everything comes to him who goes after it.

Madame Bernhardt, the great actress, at 66 is to marry a youth of 26. This way of acting will probably draw crowds for a farewell tour.

One subject to be taken up in an eastern convention is "The Elucidation of an Atom." Sounds like it might be the autobiography of the man who peeps down the business end of an unloaded (?) gun.

The man who gave the preacher who married him a worthless check and took good money in exchange, should not complain if he finds his wife wears department store hair and has a pneumatic form.

You can't make amends for forgetting to take a stitch in time.

It seems almost wrong for some people to be always right.

Some people are so dead "soot" on being agin everything that they would back right up into a hornet's nest.

Quite often a girl finds she can not live with the man she thought she would die without.

"Be a man," the mother advises her son, and then she spans him because he acts like his father.

What's the use wasting time trying to get on amicable terms with someone we can not get along with when there are plenty others suited to our temperaments.

Some women have a lot of face to try to pass off paint and powder as the real thing.

Why not start in now with your good resolutions and have them in working order when the new year rolls around.

When we attempt to satisfy envy and try a short cut to a position above our neighbor, we usually wind up by crowding that neighbor further ahead.

Roosevelt is not much of a linguist, but he talks what he does talk.

Criticism is at least recognition.

The more some folks live on their face, the more face they seem to have.

"It's funny how much confidence human beings have that someone else can fix something that they have given up themselves.

The price some people pay to live seems like a useless waste of money for what they get out of it.

A man is seldom overbearing to (good looking) women.

Gratitude is the interest you pay on kindness shown you. There are too few opportunities to pay this kind of interest.

Don't expect to get as much as you give—except in a fight.

Majorities may not always be right, but they get the benefit of the doubt.

Visits Old Home.

Bert Burrows, son of Charles Burrows, who left Ord a dozen years ago, is back to Ord on a visit and is accompanied by his wife and child. They are all a fine looking group and people to be proud of. When the Burrows left Ord eleven or twelve years ago they went to Sargent, two years later going to Oregon, where their homes are now. Bert graduated from the schools and for a while was principal of the Oregon school where he lived, but since then took up railroad-ing, in a responsible and remunerative position. This is the only vacation he has asked for for a long time and he is about to make good use of this occasion. The elder Burrows is in the real estate business and is doing well. —Ord Quiz.
