Drives Off a Terror.

The chief executioner of death in the winter and spring months is pneumonia. Its advance agents are colds and grip. In any attack by one of these maladies no time should be lost in taking the best medicine obtainable to drive it off. Countless thousands have found this to be Dr. King's New Discovery. "My husband believes it has kept him from having pneumonia three or four times," writes Mrs. George W. Place, Rawsonville, Vt., "and for coughs, colds and croup we have never found its equal." Guaranteed for all bronchial affections. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at All Druggists.

Va., "for the wonderful double benefit I got from Electric Bitters, in curing me of both a severe case of stomach trouble and of rheumatism, from which I had been an almost helpless sufferer for ten years. It suited my case as though made just for me." For dyspepsia, indigestion, jaundice and to rid the system of kidney poisons that cause rheumatism, Electric Bitters have no equal. Try them. Going Home to John

Our Dumb Animals.

"Going north, madam?"
"No, ma'am."
"Going south, then?"
"I don't know, ma'am. I never was on the cars. I'm waiting for the train to go to John."
"John?"
"Oh! John's my son. He's out in Kansas."

"I'm going to Kansas myself. You intend to visit?"
"No, ma'am."
She said it with a sigh so heart-burdened the stranger was touched.

"John sick?"
"No."

The evasive tone, the look of pain in the furrowed face, were noticed by the lady who asked these questions as the gray head bowed upon the toll-marked hand. She wanted to hear her story, and to help her.

"Excuse me—John in trouble?"
"No, no—I'm in trouble. Trouble my old heart never thought to see."
"The train does not come for some time. Here rest your head upon my cloak."

"You are kind. If my own were so I shouldn't be in trouble."

"What is your trouble? Maybe I can help you."

"It's hard to tell it to strangers, but my heart is too full to keep it back. When I was left a widow with three children, I thought it was more than I could bear; but it wasn't bad as this—"

The stranger waited till she recovered her voice to go on.

"I had only the cottage on my hands I toiled early and late all the years till John could help me. Then we kept the girls at school—John and me. They were married not long ago. Married rich, too, as the world goes. John sold the cottage, sent me to the city to live with them and he went West to begin for himself. He said he had provided for the girls, and they would provide for me now."

Her voice choked with emotion. The stranger waited in silence.

"I went to them in the city. I went to Mary's first. She lived in a great house with servants to wait on her; a house many times larger than the little cottage—but I soon found there wasn't room enough for me—"

The tears stood in the lines of her cheeks. The ticket agent came out softly, stirred the fire and went back. After a pause she continued:

"I went to Martha's—went with a pain in my heart I never felt before. I was willing to do anything so as not to be a burden. But that wasn't it. I found they were ashamed of my bent old body and my withered face—ashamed of my rough, wrinkled hands—made so toiling for them—"

The tears came thick and fast now. The stranger's hand rested carelessly on the gray head. "At last they told me I must live at a boarding-house, and they'd keep me there. I couldn't say anything. My heart was too full of pain. I wrote to John what they were going to do. He wrote right back, a kind long, letter for me to come right to him. I should always have a home while he had a roof, he said. To come right there and stay as long as I lived. That his mother should never go out to strangers. So I'm going to John. He's only got his rough hands and his great warm heart—but there is room for his old mother—God bless—him—"

The stranger brushed a tear from her cheek and waited the conclusion.

"Some day when I am gone where I'll never trouble them again. Mary and Martha will think of it all. Some day when the hands that toiled for them are folded and still; when the eyes that watched over them through many a weary night are closed forever; when the little old body, bent with the burdens it bore for them, is put away where it never can shame them—"

The agent drew his hand quickly before his eyes, and went out as if to look for the train. The stranger's fingers stroked the gray locks, while the tears of sorrow and of sympathy fell together. The weary heart was unburdened. Soothed by a touch of sympathy the troubled soul yielded to the longing of rest, and she fell asleep. The agent went noiselessly about his duties that he might not wake her.

As the fair stranger watched she saw a smile on the careworn face. The lips moved. She bent down to hear.

"I'm doing it for Mary and Martha. They'll take care of me some time."

She was dreaming of the days in the little cottage—of the fond hopes which inspired her, long before she learned, with a broken heart, that some day she would be homeless in the world go to John.

and
DR. UPTODATE

We all remember the preacher of the good old days who went up to twenty-fifth and who seldom got nearer to the present day than Moses. That type of minister is passing out. Of recent years the pastor is talking of present day problems and helping his flock solve the questions that confront the world now.

He reads the papers. He knows what is going on. He sees the finger of the divine writing history in our own time. He finds inspiration in world movements.

He does not read his Bible less, but his newspaper more, than did the preacher of the old school.

The press can help the pulpit, the pulpit in turn can help the press, and both can help you. Take the home paper.

"Man Who Stood Still."

The death of D. W. Stockwell of Aurora, Ill., marked the passing of one of the quaintest characters in Illinois. He was known as the "man who stood still." As owner of one of the biggest stores outside of Chicago during the civil war he prospered. After the war he failed to keep abreast of the times and the same goods which he carried then are still on the shelves and show windows of the store.

Five years after the war Stockwell still was making a profit. In ten years more the place was a curiosity shop, and has continued so. The hoop-skirt, barber-striped hose and jet jewelry continued a part of his stock. In later years he was the only one who entered the place except visitors to the city. He did no advertising.

He had about $10,000 worth of goods and settled down to wait for customers who never came. He was at business at 7 o'clock each morning and remained until 6 o'clock in the evening. He was 76 years old.
