ENTERTAIN IN HONOR OF BRIDE

Members of Eastern Star Hold Shower for Miss Oglesby.

The shower given Saturday afternoon by Worthy the Matron and points of the star of the O. E. S. in honor of Miss Anna Oglesby was one of the most pleasant and most enjoyable social affairs of the season.

The function was held at the home of the Worthy Matron, Mrs. H. A. Miller, who was assisted by Mrs. C. C. Cruson, Mrs. J. A. Elledge, Mrs. Geo. O. Knowles and Mrs. F. W. Robbins, points of the star.

The guests were first given little cards bearing hand painted umbrellas in the colors of the O. E. S. and were asked to write three wishes. The wishes were numerous and laughable, Miss Esther Silsby winning the prize. A rose of fortune was then placed upon the table and the guests handed little silk bags containing rose petals, which they held over their heads as the rose of fortune, the petals falling upon the written sentences indicating the fortune of the owner of the petals.

Miss Oglesby was then initiated into the Housekeeper's Club, the following obligation being used:

I, Anna Oglesby, soon to be Graham, do of my own free will and accord solemnly promise that I will reveal any and all of the secrets of this club to anyone desiring to receive the same; that I will wage a never-ending war against germs, dust and poor cooking, and I will to the utmost of my ability master the intricacies of the kitchen range, the maid's temper, and my husband's appetite. I furthermore promise that I will not allow myself to become disheartened through failures, nor worried through trifles; that I will cherish a cheerful face, a cordial manner, and repose of spirit beyond any other qualification of my home. To all of which I pledge my sacred word of honor as a housekeeper.

The wedding march was then played by Mrs. Geo. Kerr. The bride elect, preceded by her ring bearer, Master Nichols, carrying a large ring on a pink cushion, with the little flower girls at his side, and followed by the four bridesmaids, Mrs. Cruson, Miss Baker, Miss Silsby and Miss Nickerson, slowly marched through the rooms to a small room at the end of the hall, where the bride was asked to take a peep at the gifts presented her. A delicious luncheon was served by the hostesses.

Henry Landess left Sunday morning for San Francisco, where he was married yesterday to Miss Gertrude M. Cavitt, a charming, popular young lady of that city. Mr. Landess is a son of Wm. Landess, East Main St., and is well known here and in the Bohemia district, where he is superintendent of the Champion mine. Mr. and Mrs. Landess are now on their way north and will go direct to Portland, where they will spend a week during the Elks' Convention, after which they will return to Cottage Grove for a short stay before going to Bohemia for the summer.

Arthur Ferguson and Miss Mary Crabtree, both of this city, were married Saturday by Justice R. S. Bryson at Eugene.

Mrs. S. L. Mackin entertained the Emanon Club Tuesday afternoon in honor of her guest, Miss Leona Burwell of Tacoma.

Invitations have been issued by Mrs. F. W. Robbins for a Dutch party tomorrow evening.

The Social Twelve Embroidery Club was delightfully entertained at the pleasant home of Mrs. L. S. Hill last Thursday afternoon. The hostess served light refreshments. Members present were Mesdames Hall, Lurch, Eakin, Compton, Barnett, Abrams and Hill.

Miss Belle Burkholder was pleasantly surprised Monday evening by a crowd of her young friends, the occasion being one of her birthday anniversaries, presumably the 22nd.

The surprise was complete and the merry crowd spent a most enjoyable evening. One feature of entertainment which caused much merriment for the guests and quite as much embarrassment for Miss Burkholder was the display of photographs of herself from the age of six months to the present time. Vocal solos were rendered by several of the guests, accompanied by Miss Esther Silsby. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. Those present were: Misses Leah Perkins, Blanche Veatch, Atha Widderheim, Grace Lily, Mabel Veatch, Marguerite Johnson, Elsie Lea, Jennie Smith, Ipha Widdersheim, Hazel Hazelton, Esther Silsby, Veta Holderman, Neita Hazelton, Allie Phillip, Messrs. Harry Short, Joe Smith, Ernest Wyatt, Charlie Beidler, Chester Banta, Albert Woodard, Albert Anderson, Lloyd Bis-

MISSANNA OGLESBY IS JUNE BRIDE

Only Daughter of Pioneer of Valley Marries James P. Graham.

A prominent society event of the past week was the marriage of Miss Anna Oglesby to James P. Graham, which occurred Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. A. S. Only intimate friends and relatives were present, although many friends called to offer congratulations and partake of the refreshments.

The bride was gown in cream silk trimmed with lace and wore white roses in her hair. The Oglesby home was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the parlor being a bower of white roses, ivy and fern. The dining room was glorious in red rambler roses.

Miss Oglesby is the only daughter of Dr. W. W. Oglesby, one of the best known pioneers of this section of the valley and was for several months society editor of The Sentinel. Mr. Graham is a new resident of the city and a partner in the Bellingham Second Hand Store.

Pretty Wedding at Creswell.

One of the prettiest home weddings in Creswell for some time took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Yeoman, at high noon on Thursday of last week, when their daughter, Lulu Dean Yeoman, was married to Clarence I. Kent. Seventy-five guests witnessed Rev. Dunlop, assisted by Rev. Stratford, perform the ceremony. The bride, dressed in a rich white brocade taffeta, trimmed with white chiffon, was given away by her father. The groom wore the usual black. Miss Ruth Erickson of Macleay, Oregon, an old friend of the bride, acted as maid of honor. Miss Alice Kimball was bridesmaid and Elmore Kent acted as best man. The ring ceremony was used, Vera Mc Donah being ring bearer.—Chronicle.

TEACHERS' INTEREST IN FARMING

Dr. James Withycombe of O. A. C. Talks to Pedagogues at School.

Urging a greater interest in rural problems and in the introduction of agricultural enthusiasm into the school room, Dr. James Withycombe, director of the experiment stations, spoke this afternoon before the teachers gathered at the Oregon Agricultural College summer sessions.

"The supreme purpose of education is citizenship," said Dr. Withycombe in introduction. "Thus the cardinal principle that should dominate our common school work should be education for efficiency. We are citizens of a state marvelous for its agricultural opportunities, yet we present the peculiar anomaly of having only about 30 per cent of our population living upon the land."

"As a nation we have made tremendous progress; for example, while we have only 7 per cent of the inhabited area of the world, yet we have two-fifths of the bank deposits and banking capital of the world, over one-third of the railways of the globe and we produce over one-fifth of the world's wheat, three-fourths of the world's corn, and one-fourth of the oats. This fabulous production, however, is not due so much to our good methods of farming, as to the great fertility of our virgin soils. This fertility through faulty methods is being rapidly exhausted; hence every rural person is interested in methods for its future conservation."

"While we are producing immense quantities of agricultural commodities, the fact remains that according to our present increase of population, the question of feeding our people is a vital one. Statistics show that our population doubles every twenty five years. According to this, in about 50 years we shall have some 400,000,000 people in the United States."

"There is not a great deal of undeveloped agricultural area left and we will have reclaimed through irrigation and improved methods of dry farming that which is not now occupied. When we consider this great economic problem it certainly seems that the school children of our country should get some idea early in life regarding the probable solution."

"The pupils in the lower grades should have their attention directed to some phase of agriculture, as this is our great basic industry. Teachers should have a deep sympathy and interest in rural affairs. They should get hold of some examples of successful farmers and bring them in some way to the attention of the boys in the public schools."

"A farmer in this country, for example, last year harvested $8,000 worth of clover seed from 80 acres of land while his neighbor on a similar area in two seasons, including summer fallow, raised but 35 bushels of wheat an acre, worth only $25 an acre, with perhaps double the cost of production per acre. This should be shown the students and it may be possible to excite their interest in clover growing."

"A good plan would be to secure a clover plant, or one of vetch or some other legume, and show the nodules on the roots, explaining the nitrogen organisms thereon, and their beneficial effect on the soil as regards to crops. Again, another good educational feature would be to secure some good, typical, rural scenes as pictures to hang on the walls of the school—fine horses, high class swine and cattle, good poultry breeds—and occasionally call the attention of the children to their merits. In this way the boys will begin to think there is something in agriculture."

"I am not a very firm believer in elementary agriculture in the public school, but I do favor making it elementary fundamental agriculture. Rural economic problems could be presented, as the question of co-operative marketing, buying and selling, and co-operative banking, thus calling the attention of the pupils to methods of reducing the great cost of marketing the products of the farm. This would be a great benefit to the producer and the consumer as well, in the next generation."

"Since agriculture is our great basic industry, this work should be emphasized in all our public schools. Of necessity 90 per cent of our population must choose industrial occupations. In a state like Oregon, agriculture is the great field of opportunity."

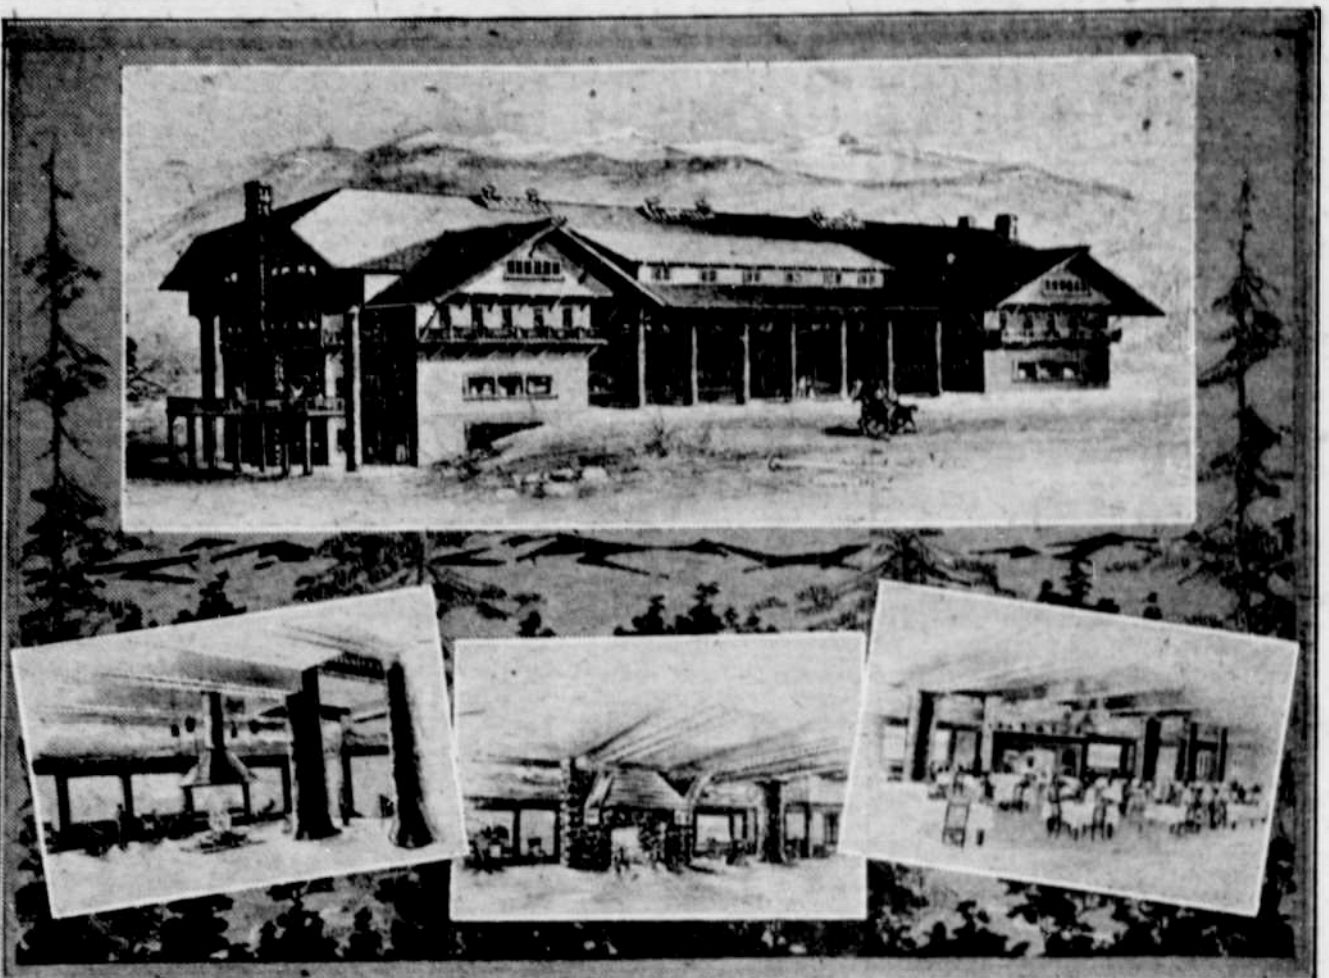

FOREST FIRE BULLETIN IS ISSUED

Spring Weather Conditions Have Prevented Serious Loss.

Reassuring bulletins on the forest fire risk at the beginning of July have been received by the Western Forestry & Conservation Association from practically all state, government and private protective agencies in the Pacific Northwest. The most prominent feature of the situation is the perfected preparation all are making, especially in more systemized cooperation between the several forces than has existed in former years. There have been no serious fires since the abnormal dry spell in May. Although June

START WORK ON SUMMER RESORT HOTEL

Great Northern's $75,000 Structure in Glacier National Park Will Be Built Mainly of Logs; Some Six Feet in Diameter.

In preparation for the entertainment of the large number of sight-seers who are expected this season to visit Glacier National Park, work already has been commenced by the Great Northern towards the erection of its proposed $75,000 hotel at Glacier Park (formerly known as Midvale) the eastern entrance of the new park. The hotel will be about 200 by 100 feet, built mainly of logs, somewhat similar in style to the Forestry Building at the Seattle Exposition.

Already fifty carloads of logs have been received at Glacier Park station for use in this structure, some of the logs being of such proportions that no more than two could be placed upon a car. Some of these logs are no less than six feet in diameter, and as a number are to be used for pillars in the main lobby, which pillars are to be fifty-two feet in height, some idea of their immensity may be gained.

In connection with the building of the hotel, Guthrie & Co., Great Northern contractors, already have started the construction of a magnificent automobile road, which will extend through the reservation for a distance of forty miles from Glacier Park to the edge of the park, seven miles from St. Mary's Lake. From this point on to the lake the road will be built by the government. This road will form the northern terminus of the park to park road which is to be built through Montana Yellowstone National Park and which promises to be one of the most popular driveways through the country.

In addition to the large lobby dining room, kitchen and other public rooms, the hotel will contain about 100 guest rooms. The structure will be most artistically decorated in a manner in keeping with its rustic style, and the whole will accord with the rough grandeur of its scenic setting.

CRUELTY BRINGS OWN REWARD

Trust of Horse Nearly Brings Death to Its Master.

Attempt to dynamite a faithful but superannuated horse and the trust of the horse in its master nearly brought death to Ezra Meeker, of Puyallup, Wash.

For thirty years the horse had been a faithful animal but had come to a precarious condition, so that Meeker decided to destroy it painlessly. He bought two sticks of dynamite, caps and a bit of fuse. He tied the explosive to the horse's neck, inserted the caps and attached the fuse. When all was ready the fuse was lighted and Meeker ran for the orchard, 100 yards away, as fast as his 79 years would permit. The old man had not gone far when, hearing a noise behind, he turned to behold the old horse following him at a brisk trot. The animal was frightened at the sizzling fuse dangling from its neck and sought protection at the hands of its master. Meeker realized his danger and ran faster. A barbed wire fence separated the orchard from the pasture and this the old man hurdled like a deer. The horse stopped at the fence and then something happened. The farmer, with his clothes in shreds, found himself in an apple tree. The old horse had vanished, together with fifty yards of the fence.—American Homestead.

What to Read.

If you have the blues, read Psalm 27. If your pocket book is empty read Psalm 37. If people seem unkind, read St. John 15. If you are discouraged about your work, read Psalm 126. If you are all out of sorts, read Hebrews 12. If you are losing confidence in men, read First Corinthians 13. If you can't have your own way in every thing, keep silent and read James 3.
