The productiveness of Willamette valley soil is something which causes even an old resident to marvel over. To see a bunch of red clover, which measures four feet, ten inches in height is to gaze upon some clover. E. W. Roberts, of Roberts Brothers who are farming the G. T. Linn place two miles east of Waverly, brought in a sheaf of clover recently which registered this height. What is more remarkable in the development of this hay product is the fact that it was sown on the 11th of March and harvested on July 20th. Mr. Roberts says he treated the soil with land plaster.—Register.
