IT'S A BIG MISTAKE

Made By Many Cottage Grove Res-

Many people in a misguided effort to ... get rid of kidney backache, rely on ... laxatives, liniments and other make-

Mrs. Ella Bisbey, S. Fourth St., Cot-

Novel Note on
New Nightgowns.

ONE OF THE LATEST MODELS.
Ribbons run through leading at the base of the yokes are familiar enough trimmings on nightgowns, but this oblique adornment on the robe de nuit illustrated is decidedly interesting.
The ribbon leading slopes upward at the front and back and meets just in front of the left arm.

WOMEN AS JOURNALISTS.

They Started Newspapers Over a Cen... tury Ago.

One of the men of broad minds—Joseph Pulitzer—employed a large number of women as writers on his very successful newspapers, and yet when he made the gift of $500,000 to found a school of journalism appended the provision that women should not be permitted to attend the school. The provision has caused much wonder-ment.
During the past fifty years women have developed the qualities that go to make a journalist remarkable. They are more and more adapting themselves to meeting the requirements of the alert reporter. It has been less than fifty years since women entered seriously upon newspaper work, though, according to Robert McWades, the first daily paper published was started by a woman, the first newspaper in Rhode Island had a woman as its publisher, as had also the second newspaper started in New York city.
The Maryland Gazette, the first paper established in Lord Baltimore's colony, was started by a woman, and the same is true of the Virginia Gazette, the first newspaper to print the Declaration of Independence. Looking the field over, women have done very well in newspaper work, and they will continue to do so notwithstanding the Pulitzer school of journalism.

Memory in Children.
Much to the amusement of our social amateurs, the precocious child has gone out of fashion. No longer have we to stifle yawns and to smile while our fingers tingle from a desire to smack as a baby prodigy recites Shakespeare or makes grandiloquent speeches or gives impromptu scale practice on the piano.

In fact, the tendency is the other way. We are on the upswing of a Rousseau movement, and the dear babies are being turned out to do gardening and to cultivate powers of observation apart from books and pen and ink.
The nursery has become a menagerie and botanical museum, and that her boy or girl of seven is ignorant of the alphabet is the latest and proudest boast of the loving mother.

A change all to the good surely did it not seemingly take as much time, trouble and teaching to keep up a condition of book ignorance as of book knowledge.

What is considered brain development in a child is nearly always a matter of memory and adaptability, just a parrot-like quality strongly developed.
The child just remembers and imitates.

One has this shown very clearly in the historical records of royalties.
Where the young prince or princess has, through the pressure of state affairs, been obliged to live surrounded by diplomatists and ministers, the child has picked up the jargon in the most astonishing fashion.

Is it not on record that when Mary, queen of Scots, as a child of eight years, met her mother at Rouen, the little queen's reply to the maternal caresses was the inquiry, "What factiousness continued to exist in the noble families of Scotland?" and "whether the English still harassed her native country; whether worship remained pure and the prelates and clergy did their duty?"

At twelve she writes an essay on the demeanor and duties of princes concluded in the language of an elderly statesman. Yet, though a brilliant woman, man who can say that Mary Stuart's later life was remarkable in wisdom and diplomacy? Her precocity was just the repetition of the sentiments and expressions she heard about her.

And might not one hazard the optimism that the weighting of the memory destroys other faculties and gives a reason why the precocious child so early becomes a distinct rocket—its light and fizzle and glare all ended before maturity is reached. Perhaps it is this consciousness which makes us all have a feeling of pity for the precocious child and to rejoice so heartily that juvenile displays no longer shadow our afternoons. In some things at least we make for progress.

Books For the Little Folks.
Nowadays nobody remembers a book entitled "Sandford and Merton," and nobody reads "The Parent's Assistant," yet once upon a time these two musty, tiresome, goody goody books were considered by wise and proper grownups to be appropriate and beneficial reading for their boys and girls.

All of which proves the fallacy of hankering for "the good old days." We should be grateful for our wonderfully progressive twentieth century that sends "Sandford and Merton" and "The Parent's Assistant" disappearing beneath an almost bewildering avalanche of charming juvenile publications and be glad that our boys and girls are provided with books written to meet the needs of their natures and imagination.

Perhaps the worthiest progress has been made in the books that are now written for very little folks, for those children who are just beginning to discover the wondrous delight of reading themselves. They must have books wherein the print is large, the language simple and the illustrations attractive. And these have been given to them. Not only Grimm's and Anderson's fairy tales have been retold, but Kingsley's "Water Babies," "Robinson Crusoe," "Stories of King Arthur's Knights" and "Udline" have been issued in delightful little volumes designed to suit very young readers.

Besides these, there are many story books and picture books that are mar-vels of workmanship and cleverness.
Among these can be recommended Brooke's "Johnny Crow's Garden," Blaisdell's "Tommy Tinker Book," Beatrix Potter's "Tale of Peter Rabbit" and "Tale of Squirrel Nutkin," Holbrook's "Hawatha Primer" and Chase's "Children of the Wigwam."

Willie's Question.
"Pa, was Job a doctor?"
"Not that I know of."
"Then why do people have so much to say about the patients of Job?"

Prince Hirohito, Heir Apparent to the Throne of Japan.

When Mutsuhito, emperor of Japan, died a short time ago his only son, Prince Yoshihito, became emperor.
The new emperor has three sons, and the eldest of these, Prince Hirohito, becomes the heir apparent and may one day rule the Japanese empire.
Hirohito was born in April, 1901, and is therefore just past eleven years of age. His mother's name is Sadako, and she is a daughter of Prince Kujo.
A great many of the Japanese names seem to end with the letter "o." Hirohito's two brothers are named Yasuhito and Nobuhito. One is ten years old and the other seven.

Talking Shop.
Partners may be chosen for this game by writing names of women on one set of papers, such as Eve, Jill, Juliet, Judy, and names of men corresponding to them on another set of papers, as Adam, Jack, Romeo, Purch.
Hand each guest a slip of paper with a name on it, and each one hunts for his or her partner.

When all are properly paired off the leader announces that at a given signal all the ladies are to talk to their partners for five minutes about household affairs, shopping, preserving, fashions and servants. Each man must listen attentively to his partner, and when the five minutes are up he must write a brief account of her conversation on paper, which the hostess has in readiness. Five minutes are allowed for this.

Then the men talk to the ladies for five minutes about business matters, stocks, law, medicine, horses, cigars, and the ladies in their turn write a short account of what they have heard. The hostess collects and reads the papers awarding a prize for the best one.

A Repeating Game.
After a stand-up game a rather funny game, where all the company may sit, is to have one person chosen to call and the rest to repeat. One good fat hen, two ducks, three plump partridges, four squawking wild geese, five felicitous oysters, six pairs of Roman striped hose, 7,000 Spanish soldiers, eight cages of Helioabulus parakeets, nine sympathetic, apathetic, didactic, propositions; eleven superstitious astronomers viewing Venus in Venice, twelve European dancing masters teaching Egyptian mummies to dance at Hercules' wedding. If any one laughs in the course of this he must pay a forfeit. The one who repeats most smoothly and solemnly must be the caller out and begin gib-berish over again.

A Mine of the Incas.
One of the famous lost emerald mines of Peru is said to have been discovered recently by a Greek immigrant. This man had some land near the little village of Acomayo, and he wanted some lime for building purposes. So he set some workmen to digging out limestone. The men dug in a depression that looked like a natural cave. Soon, however, the Greek proprietor thought that the cave did not look natural, and he began investigating. He thought it might be a mine, and so it was—so they say. He found three different holes with emeralds in them farther down in the old workings, and then it dawned on him that he had discovered one of the lost mines of the Incas, the sovereigns of ancient Peru.
