TO TEACH JOURNALISM AT STATE UNIVERSITY

Fourth Estate Being Singularly Recognized by Oregon's Educational Institution.

Journalism, which is the catalogue word for what the newspaper men usually prefer to call "newspaper work," appeared among the subjects taught when the University of Oregon opened its doors in Eugene September 17.

The newspaper is the last of the great public institutions and professions to gain official recognition from the universities of the country, but faculties all over the United States have awakened to its surpassing importance in a democratic society, and the training of newspaper men has become an important duty in many of the best colleges. The universities were conservative about entering a new field, but the two great middle western state institutions of Wisconsin and Missouri went ahead and established schools of journalism. It was not until practical editors, skeptical at first, began to admit that the training brought excellent results, that the movement spread rapidly.

The work at Oregon has been placed in charge of Eric W. Allen, recently northwest editor of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. He was selected because he combined experience of both the metropolitan and country press with adequate university training and a successful record as a teacher. He has never been far from the smell of printers' ink since his boyhood.

Mr. Allen's idea is to keep the work in close touch with the practical newspaper men of the state, and he has already arranged with many of them to address his classes later in the year. Journalism is a subject on which there are as yet virtually no textbooks. The best newspapers of the country will be studied in the class room, and all the newspapers of Oregon will be in daily use. The students will get practical training on the many publications issued at the University, and will be encouraged to offer their work to the outside press.

Had it remained on the tree until fully matured it certainly would have weighed much more.—Coquille Herald.

Grange Wins Third Place at Fair

DYING THINKS ONLY OF MOTHER

NOT AFRAID OF DEATH, SAYS INJURED MAN.

With the words, "I'm not afraid to die myself, but what will happen to my widowed mother and sister?" big, strong, beloved "Chico" Brown, one of the best known and most proficient loggers that ever worked for the Row River Lumber company at Row River, went to his death Saturday after one of the worst accidents that has happened at any of the mills in this vicinity for several years.

"Chico" had just assisted in sawing off a log, and left his partner to finish the "snipping" while he stepped back to pick up his tools. The log unexpectedly started down a slight incline and Brown was caught under it. It was thought that the man had met instant death, but although horribly mangled and crushed he regained consciousness and the big "boy" of 50 gave expression to the tender sentiment already quoted. He died a few hours later in this city, where he was brought by automobile.

Brown was a single man and sent all his savings to his mother and sister who reside at Chico, California, where the body has been shipped for burial.

Orders More Brisk and Price Is Some Better.

The lumber market is stiffening up considerably, especially in the way of orders, and local mills are much encouraged with the increase in business. Among the relics of pioneer days exhibited was a firearm made by the father of Mr. Crow. The four chambers are placed in a block that has a lateral movement in front of the barrel. Both the trigger and hammer are underneath, and the arm was fired by the old-style percussion caps. Mrs. Crow brought in a bed spread that her great-grandmother had made in 1797. Addresses were made by President Eby, Vice-President Crow, Albert Walker, T. G. Hendricks, Dr. and Mrs. H. F. McCornick and others.

KILLED IN BAD AUTO ACCIDENT

ANOTHER EUGENE MAN IN SERIOUS SMASHUP

Jesse W. Bounds Meets Instant Death in Wreck Similar to That Which Befell Sheriff Bown.

Jesse W. Bounds, president of the J. W. Bounds Timber company of Eugene, was killed instantly and Joe Devine, logger and timber cruiser, was badly injured when Mr. Bounds' big Stevens-Duryea automobile turned turtle on the McKenzie road 30 miles east of Eugene Saturday night.

It is not known exactly what caused the accident, as Devine is unable to give a clear account of it, but from the tracks in the road it is clearly seen that the automobile ran into the side of the hill at the left of the road and turned over.

It is probable that the soft condition of the road made it hard for Mr. Bounds to steer straight. It is seen by the tracks of the wheels that the automobile first struck a rock at the side of the road, then the front wheel on the left hand side dashed into the hillside, with the result that the machine turned clear over and came down with a crash. Mr. Bounds was pinned beneath the back of the front seat and his chest was found to be badly crushed. There were also bad bruises on his head and face.

A farmer's family about a mile from the scene of the accident was awakened Sunday morning about four o'clock by cries for help. They went into the yard and found Devine crawling toward the house. He suffered a fracture of two or three ribs and was struck on the head, the latter injury accounting for his dazed condition.

Devine is pretty badly hurt. He has two or three broken ribs, was struck on the head and seems to be hurt internally. If the internal injuries do not prove serious the doctor thinks he will get well soon.

Mr. Bounds was a native of Oregon and was aged 42 years. He leaves a wife and one son, Frank. Mr. Bounds had been engaged in the timber business in Eugene for six years. The funeral will be held today.

FRACTURES ARM IN RUNAWAY

Chester Howitt of Creswell Knocked Unconscious and Seriously Injured in Accident.

Chester Howitt of Creswell was knocked unconscious and his right arm fractured in three places in a runaway accident just before 6 o'clock Tuesday night.

The accident happened just as the rig turned the corner around the Cottage Grove Manufacturing Co.'s plant. The horses did not appear to be unmanageable and it is not certain whether Mr. Howitt jumped out or fell out. At any rate he fell to the road and was dragged a short distance before the horses stopped. S. Roy Smith witnessed the accident and went to the injured man's assistance, taking him to a physician's office, where the severe fractures were discovered. Although unconscious, chloroform was necessary before the injuries could be dressed.

Mr. Howitt regained consciousness about 1:30 the next morning and was taken to Creswell the next forenoon by relatives who came for him.

He had been to Dorena with an uncle who is to teach school there and was returning when the accident happened. It is thought by those who witnessed the accident that it was due entirely to carelessness.

Single Tuber Yields 12 Bushels.

Eugene Dumond, a 14-year-old Albany boy, entered an exhibit of 12 bushels of potatoes at the state fair which caused the employes of the fair and the visitors to take notice. The unusual feature about the exhibit was the fact that the entire 12 bushels of potatoes were produced from a single potato which was planted in a hot-house.

As soon as a shoot appeared above the dirt it was carefully removed, transferred to the garden, where it was planted. Other shoots immediately came, which were removed as fast as possible, until nearly 200 had been planted, from which the entire 12 bushels were raised, 11 of which are remarkable.

TREASURE MINE PROVING TRUE TO ITS NAME

Marvelous Strike of Richest Ore in Oregon Is Unexpectedly Made.

If the strike recently made at the Treasure Mine in the Blue River district had been made anywhere else in the United States there would be no end to the blow about it and people would be rushing to this section like they did to the Klondike in the early 90's.

F. E. Litzenberg, who with Dan McAllen owns a lease on the property with an option to buy, came in from Blue River with J. W. Owens last evening, and by special courtesy the writer was given an opportunity to look at the grip full of specimens of ore Mr. Litzenberg was taking to Portland. He did not care for any publicity, he said, as the gold is there and he is on his way to Portland now to get heavy canvas bags to carry out the richest ore, and ship it away. He insisted that it was just that the people of this section should know what they have found and a peep was allowed us at the shining yellow metal of which he had a plenty in his grip. The ore is literally filled with little nuggets, stringers and leaves of gold, which he allowed us to examine, and it didn't take any magnifying glass to see them either.

The strike is a well defined lead of about four feet in thickness, but this lead does not carry all such rich ore. It will run $50 per ton easily, but the real rich ore is a vein about four inches in width, which runs in the same relative position with the main lead all through the 18 feet it has been followed since the strike was made.

Mr. Litzenberg is not seeking publicity on the find at all. He only knows they have it and is simply going about in a business way to secure means of taking care of the ore which is rich enough in itself to pay handsomely. He will contract for a lot of heavy canvas sacks for taking the ore to market. Wies Owens is very enthusiastic and says it is the greatest gold strike ever made in Oregon.
