TRAINING GIRLS FOR LIFE WORK

Mistake to Educate for Society Whirl.—Mothers Should See They Learn to Sew.

"A mother who trains her daughter for a 'society bud' will regret it in after years, and most surely the young lady herself will regret it in her mature years; but the mother who trains and teaches her daughter to become a good mother and housewife will be loved, respected and venerated by that daughter, as the latter herself reaps the benefit of the training and teaching in after years," says an editorial in a recent number of the Myrtle Point Enterprise.

"The mothers of the country should think about these things much more than they do, and thus do better work as true home builders for future generations. In her home one woman can do more for the uplift of humanity than did a thousand suffragettes in London who, in smashing windows made material for sensational stories for the yellow journals of the world, or than could a thousand Carrie Nations with a thousand hatchets and a thousand votes."

The Oregon Agricultural College does not pretend to educate young women for careers as Carrie Nations and suffragettes, but it does graduate each year large classes of young women prepared to administer efficiently a wholesome, happy home, and in a most economical way. The department of domestic science and art opened its class work Tuesday morning, Sept. 24. The domestic science work includes courses in simple food preparation, and more advanced cookery, invalid diet and refreshments, laundering, the serving of meals, camp cookery, food for children, house sanitation, household administration, home nursing, marketing, the study of home problems, a course on the evolution of the house which gives something of the history of home-making, and special training in the theory and practice of teaching domestic science for those who wish to take instructional positions after leaving college.

In the domestic art department the sewing classes learn something of spinning and weaving and the fundamentals of the art and then learn to make underwear, to darn and mend, to make simple dresses and later more elaborate costumes, to embroider and crochet garments and household articles, to care for their clothing, to draft patterns, to do tailoring and designing, to make their own hats and trim them; they learn basketry and rug weaving, stenciling and different kinds of handwork; they study house construction and decoration; and are given, if they desire, special training for teaching these branches.

Thus the girl who has completed the four-years course in household economics is well prepared to establish and carry on a home of her own, or to teach other girls, in the schools and colleges of the state, the requisites of a proper education for home making.

SHOW MANY GIANTS

Vegetable Gardening and Floriculture Exhibition at Agricultural College.

Chinese and Cuban giants, American wonders and various other curiosities were exhibited this week at the Oregon Agricultural College vegetable gardening and floricultural show. Truck gardeners from sixteen different districts of the state contributed fine specimens of all kinds of truck crops, and a large array was brought in from the college greenhouses and experimental plots.

Peanuts grown on the Umatilla Experimental Station farm were sent by Supt. R. W. Allen with some fine New York Improved egg plant. A banana tree, a rubber plant, an umbrella plant, a Loquat tree and other curiosities came from the college greenhouses with 32 fine varieties of dahlias.

Specimens and photographs showing the results of different plant diseases, including five potato diseases prevalent in Oregon, and another exhibit of truck insects and their depredations were shown by the department of plant pathology and entomology.

Packing crates and devices and garden tools and other helps were shown, with advice as to increasing profits $25 to $100 an acre by the use of dirt bands, paper and cardboard pots for early crops.

Nothing advertises a community like a good newspaper. When you want to interest your Eastern friends in the Cottage Grove country, send them a Sentinel—and the trick is done.

THE INDISPENSABLE NEWSPAPER

A reader congratulating a metropolitan newspaper upon its anniversary wrote as follows:

I owe it much, not only in matters of information, but also from the point of view of the English language, which I have in large part learned through the daily reading and digesting of its attractive and interesting pages.

A woman sent the publisher this letter:

Your clean paper, with its educational side, I consider fine in all columns. When out of town I always read it, for it tends to keep one like myself sixty years young. It is indispensable to those who would keep in daily touch with current life, thought and judgments.

Are you taking this newspaper? If not, order it today.

Our Great Progressives.

Frank Munsey, a director of the Morgan steel trust, has purchased the New York Press, and will at once direct its energies in advocacy election of Roosevelt.

Of course, as a director of the trust, Mr. Munsey is a proponent of the steel trust, is a progressive. Gary, the president of the steel who first proposed the Perkins regulating trusts, which plan is in plank in the third party platform, in fact, is progressive.

The net profits of the steel trust, $1,109,146,093 in only nine years is a sum greater than the expenditures of an extravagant States government for a whole war budget and all.

It is one-third the entire expense of the government of the United States from 1861 to 1865, including the Civil War. It is nearly three the entire cost of the Panama the greatest engineering under in the history of man.

Yet it is net profits, accumulated the steel trust of which Mr. and Mr. Perkins are directors, accumulated in only nine years.

Of course, the steel trust is progressive—Oregon Journal.
