Wasn't That Sweet?

Author Unknown

Somebody whisper'd something to me,
Can you guess?
Somebody circled my waist with his arm,
Somebody whisper'd, "Dear, don't take alarm,
Would I might shield you from Life's ev'ry harm"
Wasn't that sweet?

Somebody whisper'd something to me,
Can you guess?
Somebody bending his handsome head,
Looked into my eyes and guess what he said?
By Love's subtle art a secret I read,
Wasn't that sweet?

Somebody whisper'd something to me,
Can you guess?
Somebody asked—"Could you love me, my sweet?
My pride and my love I lay at your feet."
Was happiness ever made more complete?
Wasn't that sweet?

Somebody whisper'd something to me,
Can you guess?
Somebody said—"I trembled with fear—
I've nothing but you to worship, my dear—
How happy I'd be were you always near."
Wasn't that sweet?

Somebody whisper'd something to me,
Can you guess?
Somebody made me so happy that day
That even the air seemed charged with the lay,
"I love you—I love you—" it murmur'd all day—
Wasn't that sweet?

BUSINESS NOT DISTURBED

The Republican party must be going to the demerol bow-wows for sure when business refuses to be disturbed by the success of the iniquitous, calamity-producing Democrats: when industry refuses to be scared and money boldly flaunts itself in public places.

In attempting to account for this unprecedented condition, it may be well to remember that the Democratic party of today is not the Democratic party of 20 years ago, nor are conditions of today the conditions of a decade ago.

Wilson so far has declared for free trade only on those articles manufactured by aggrandizing monopolies and the trusts have become such a menace that even dyed-in-the-wool protectionists will welcome a radical cure.

Again, freetraders, high protectionists, low protectionists and protectionists-for-revenue-only are beginning to be suspicious that the tariff does not do all that is claimed for it, nor is it to be blamed for everything that is laid at its door. Articles put on the free list by the Payne-Aldrich bill have continually advanced in price, while others on which the tax was raised, apparently sell for the same price as before.

About 99 per cent. of a panic is unwarranted fear. With business steadily reaching out for new fields, with capital lending itself for investment, with the people who make panics feeling prosperous, contented and hopeful, there will be no panic.

Why should there be?

COLLIER'S

Many times within the past year the editor of The Sentinel has stated that Collier's Weekly used its reputation as a muckraker to blackmail public men.

Now that Editor Hapgood and Owner Collier have fallen out, the truth of our statement has been sworn to by Mr. Hapgood, who says he could no longer write moral uplift editorials knowing the business policy of the paper to be rotten to the core.

Collier's sudden dislike to Uncle

Joe Cannon, which resulted in his unseating, may be remembered.

It has been stated upon reliable authority that dislike would have disturbed to tolerance if Uncle Joe had been agreeable to paying $25,000 for the publication of his biography. The Speaker refused to be mulcted and Collier's turned its mud batteries on him. This is a sample of the business and editorial policy of the paper that has condemned and ruined public men for sins less great.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

With woman enfranchised, capital punishment is doomed. Women who did not care for the ballot are declaring that now that they have it, they will do away with that relic of barbarism, the hangman's noose.

Woman, the most sinned against creature in God's great universe, has not man's lust for revenge, she does not believe that shedding the blood of one atone's for the shedding of the blood of another. Her woman's intuition does not teach her that it is any less murder for the state to take life than for the individual to do so.

The Oregonian, the great champion of legal butchery; the Eugene Register, maybe not so great a champion as the first named, but certainly no less energetic; may be chagrined to learn that their able support of woman suffrage was an indirect effort to do away with capital punishment.

EUGENE'S HOSPITALITY

Whatever else may be said of Eugene, its citizens have the true spirit of hospitality. The editor of the Sentinel has had several occasions to test it. The last one was the meeting of the Willamette Valley Editorial Association in that city Friday. If a visitor spent a cent for his entertainment, it was his own fault. For lunch the visitors were taken in charge by the University fraternity boys, who did the honors splendidly. At dinner the girls endeavored to outdo the boys. The editor of the Sentinel was entertained by a bevy of 20 or more misses at the girls' dormitory, none of them appearing to be over 16 or 17 years of age. Despite his inherent bashfulness, the occasion was a most agreeable one to him. The visiting newspapermen were the guests of the University during the afternoon. President Campbell, assisted by Prof. Allen of the journalism department and other instructors, made the guests feel at home.

PAROLED PRISONERS

The biennial report of the superintendent of the Oregon State Penitentiary shows that 70 per cent of paroled prisoners make good. Whether or not the system can be regarded as a success depends largely upon how far the other 30 per cent has failed, but the showing seems high enough to warrant allowing Gov. West to continue his experiments until the end of his term.

A feature of the report which has received little notice is that the prison population is 375, while the total of prisoners paroled during two years is 160.

A person whose reading had been confined to the editorial page of the Oregonian and other anti-West papers would imagine that the jail doors had been opened to all and that if any were left inside the walls they remained of their own accord. The fact that the number of those in the institution at the end of the two year period is more than twice as large as the total number paroled will be surprising news to those in the East who have read only the gory editorials designed to give the impression that in Oregon murderers and degenerates are given the freedom of the state.

It is apparent from the returns that the voters honestly endeavored to do their duty with 37 measures, some of which even the farmers did not fully understand. The advice to vote "no" when in doubt seems to have been popular, but 12 measures being approved.

The dailies should cease giving publicity to that putrid stuff about the black champion. Much of it isn't even news and most of it is unfit for reading in any home.

The Oregonian must place a stricter censorship over the publication of communications or it may be charged with unfair competition by the matrimonial agencies.

Now that women have the right of suffrage in Oregon, it might be well to initiate a measure to revoke their enfranchisement, and allow only women to vote on it.

The owner of the Appeal to Reason probably got so he believed the anarchistic rot which he printed. That's one way of accounting for his suicide.

Girls Able to Earn Way Through College.

If the world contains a place where an ambitious girl can more easily obtain an education than in Eugene, the statistics are not on record.

Work for women goes begging in Oregon's college town. Housewives are paying twenty and twenty-five cents an hour for such assistance as can be rendered by young girls, and the University Y. W. C. A., which established an employment bureau for the purpose of finding places for students, has discovered that the conditions are reversed.

Instead of being called upon to find places for girls, it faces a constant demand that it find girls for the places where they are urgently needed. It still has 50 unfilled positions on its list.

Inquiry among the young women shows that a liberal allowance for expenses here is $35 a month. Even in the sorority houses, which some ill-informed persons think of as places of unreasonably expensive, a representative budget would be: Room and board, $25, miscellaneous, $10.

While present industrial conditions obtain, no girl who is willing to work about four hours a day for her living, need not despair of getting a good education in Oregon. And this means that she will be able at the same time to be a participant in the youthful pleasures that add zest to college life.

Boys have always paid their own way through the University in considerable numbers.

Fish planted in Oregon streams this year numbered 37,247,646, a very large increase over additions to the finny tribe of any former year in the state's history. Salmon, trout, bass, croppies, catfish, etc., were the fish liberated.

Things We Think

Things others think, and what we think of the things others think.

The things you did yesterday do not relieve you of your duties of today any more than the things you plan to do tomorrow.

Some folks are lucky not to be paid for what they know.

The man who never brags about his pugilistic abilities wins the majority of fights.

Sudden popularity ruins full as many men as sudden prosperity.

A man who enjoys having the women flirt with him does not care to have his wife give other men the same kind of enjoyment.

The government is telling of the new design for its $10,000 bills. What was the old design.

The Oregon Agricultural College will teach poultrying with moving pictures. A picture of the hen getting a move on would be something like it.

If only the good were to teach higher morals this old world would be in a bad way.

The democratic victory doesn't seem to have impoverished one of the candidate's supply of language.

Senator Dixon's statements issued just before the votes were cast should entitle him to an exalted position in the council of the Ananias Club.

A man who is married may not be able to do anything he wishes—but neither does he do anything just as his wife wishes.

More men fall from being light headed than because they can't balance what they have in their upper stories.

If you want a steel engraved picture that will never deteriorate in value, get one of Uncle Sam's new $10,000 bills.

No one does just as he pleases—much as he may brag that he does.

There are many noted fishermen who have a reputation for veracity in their every day business life.

People are attracted to their opposites. Very few people would be satisfied to mate up with others like themselves.

While speaking of criminals who escape punishment, it might be well to remember that the man who committed the crime of '73 hasn't been apprehended yet.

Yesterday is gone, today is yours, tomorrow you may not be here. Get busy!

Every man has a secret hope that he will be found out doing a good deed which he is trying to keep quiet.

Many things that you consider hard luck would be good luck to others.

There's never a cloud without a silver lining—but there is not always a cloud with the silver lining.

People in this old world seem bound to be unhappy. The man who fails to win a girl is not satisfied—no more than the man who gets her.

The bachelor who enjoys being free often wishes that he didn't enjoy it quite so much.

The months with r's in them are also the months when the mortality of grandmothers is lowest.

Leap year is nearly over, but it seems there will be plenty of girls left for the man who hasn't been asked.

Some men would never amount to anything anyway—and others marry illustrious women.

A girl loses half the pleasure of married life when she has to keep her engagement to herself.

Every home should be a sunshine club and every member should be a full-fledged solar system.

It is quite often the case that there is more to a slender girl than a plump one.

There is not such a cry for higher education as there is for just common, ordinary common sense.

The appearance of a girl immediately after getting her beauty sleep leads a man to think that she needed it.

There may possibly be lawyers in heaven. A lot of us are prepared to be somewhat disappointed when we get there.

If there were no women man would never get here—and wouldn't care to stay very long.

The family tree of some people must be all gnarls and knots.

When woman suffrage becomes general, it will be necessary to give a "special" on election day to get the full vote out.

A man would tell his wife more if he was certain it would stop there, but it makes a man hopping mad to have a neighbor refer to some business difficulty that one wife has learned from the other.

A number of ordinarily law-abiding citizens will soon become solons for a few months.

When speaking of sound political timber most candidates seem to think the noisy kind is referred to.
