PACKING METHOD FAULTY
Arizona Man Makes Suggestions After Receiving Shipment of Spoiled Christmas Apples.
Chloride, Ariz., Jan. 7.—Ed. Sentinel, Cottage Grove, Ore: I received a box of select apples from your city for Christmas from my brother, L. W. Riggs, and thinking that perhaps a little comment upon the way they were packed might be a benefit to the fruit raisers, hereby a few lines.
They were a much better apple than we are accustomed to getting here, large sound Baldwins, but owing to packing solely their condition was about 50 per cent less as estimated by dealers, or a 50 per cent discount from standard price, which is about 10 cents per pound here.
The whole trouble was in bending the top in over a too full box. The cover was over an inch high in the center. When the freight was put on top of it, as necessarily would occur in shipment, this rounding of the top had to spring down level with ends and sides. Hence every apple in the box from top to bottom had the one above or below it mashed into it, causing a dent and rotten spot in apple. Hardly an apple in the box escaped this impact of its neighbor and many had side impact as well from crowding.

The remedy is in clearing the box until cover does not crowd contents. Better too loose than too tight.
Hoping these few lines from the consignee's end may be of benefit to your growers in packing, I am, Yours truly,
JOHN L. RIGGS.
